

A Student's Guide To Understanding Threats

Adapted using MDE's "A Parent's Guide to Understanding Threats"

In today's world, there is no such thing as "just a joke" when it comes to threats of school violence or harm to others. Whether a threat is spoken, posted on social media or online, or sent in a text, the consequences can be serious and long-lasting.

Regardless of intent, threats can lead to legal action, school discipline, and lasting impacts on a student's future, including their eligibility for college and military service.

What Students Should Know

- Under Michigan law, a threat (even a false one) that causes fear, disrupts the school environment, or triggers an emergency response can be a criminal offense.
- A student can face consequences at school and with law enforcement, even if the threat was made from home.
- Jokes or offhand remarks like "I'm going to kill him" or "She's so annoying, I hope she dies" are taken seriously and can result in serious questioning and consequences, even if they aren't technically a legal threat.
- Sharing or reposting a threat on social media—even without knowing if it's real—is dangerous and can lead to severe consequences.
- If a student overhears a threat or sees something online that concerns them, they should report it immediately to a trusted adult or use their school's reporting tool. This is not being a "snitch"; it is being responsible and showing you care.

What you Can do as a Student

- Think before you speak, any threatening language used is not a joking matter.
- Think before you post, text, or say something that could be misinterpreted as a threat.
- Keep the following life-saving message in mind: Don't do it. Don't share it. Report it.
- Remember if you hear or see a threat, they should report it to a trusted adult at school. You can also submit a tip to OK2SAY, Michigan's Student Safety Program.

For more detailed questions and answers read Student Guide: Questions to Keep in Mind.