Update: Release of 2025 School Report Cards

Charleston, SC (October 10, 2025) – The South Carolina Department of Education (SCDE) and Education Oversight Committee (EOC) have announced that the release of the 2025 School Report Cards will take place during the first week of November.

This brief delay reflects a commitment to accuracy and transparency. Over the past several weeks, SCDE has worked closely with districts statewide to carefully review and verify data, ensuring every report card accurately reflects student and school performance.

These additional steps are already yielding positive results as South Carolina's statewide graduation rate is now the highest in more than a decade.

Because these report cards reflect the hard work of students, educators, and families across our state, it's important that they are fully validated before publication. SCDE is applying the same level of diligence across all high school metrics and providing additional time for district review to ensure precision.

This year's report cards will also include expanded Career and Technical Education (CTE) indicators, highlighting South Carolina's ongoing efforts to connect students to meaningful college and career pathways.

We appreciate the public's patience and look forward to celebrating the success and progress happening in schools across South Carolina when the 2025 Report Cards are released in early November.
