

OFFICER RETREAT! – FBLA

Last weekend, our fearless FBLA officers traded in their blazers for Blazers — heading to Portland for their annual officer retreat and to catch a Portland Trail Blazers game!

The trip was all about “team bonding,” which apparently includes hours of planning, plenty of snacks, and a lot of debating over who gets the AUX cord and front seat. Between meeting with the Trail Blazer Marketing Team and navigating Portland’s one-way streets, the team managed to squeeze in some laughs, brainstorming, and maybe a few too many selfies. To top it all off, the officers spent the evening at the Blazers game, cheering like true fans (even if half the group had to Google the players). It was the perfect combo of business and fun — a reminder that great leaders work hard and know how to have a good time.

Was GU FBLA the reason that the Blazers beat the OKC Champions? Yeah, probably.

