Our Vision

We will become proficient in all that we do.

An Invitation to Apply for the Position of SUPERINTENDENT

What Sets East Ramapo Apart

The East Ramapo Central School District, located in Rockland County, New York, is an urban/suburban school district that serves over 43,000 students from 47 countries, including 33,000 primarily Orthodox Jewish students who attend over 120 non-public schools, and benefit directly from services provided by the district, including special education, transportation, technology, and textbooks. The District serves students in the towns of Ramapo, Clarkstown and Haverstraw. Governed by a nine-member, elected Board of Education, East Ramapo is committed to meeting the varied needs of all of its students, who come from a rich diversity of backgrounds and cultures.

East Ramapo boasts a supportive and highly engaged community that advocates passionately on behalf of our students and the education the District provides them. Designated as a High Needs/Low Resource school district by the New York State Education Department, East Ramapo strives to ensure that every student always receives the best available resources and support for their individual learning needs. The District consists of two high schools, two middle schools and nine elementary schools (including a Grades 4-8 STEAM Academy), along with an Early Childhood Center.

Among the unique programs that set an East Ramapo education apart are: Smart Scholars, My Brother's Keeper, the Seal of Biliteracy, Family University, Dual Enrollment Coursework in collaboration with Syracuse University, Project Advance (SUPA), and Rockland Community College (RCC), as well as P-Tech and CDOS programs.

Curriculum implementation is under way in Grades K through 2 (Foundations); K through 5 core curriculum (American Reading Company Core); Grades 6 through 8 Carnegie Learning (Lenses on Literature); and Grades 6 through 8 Curriculum Associates (iReady). Other initiatives include the Secondary Seal of Civic Readiness, New Visions Curriculum (high school), and the aforementioned P-Tech program.

District History

The name Ramapo derives from an Algonquin word that meant 'round pond' or 'sweet water.' Ramapo developed on the early stage coach route between New York City and Albany. Schools were established by 1850 in most of the towns and villages of what is now East Ramapo. The Board of Union Free District #7 first met on Jan. 30, 1871. In 1873, the Little Red Schoolhouse, a one-room school, was established. This was rededicated in 1975 as a museum. On March 4, 1952, seven school districts merged to form Ramapo Central School District No.2, the largest school district in Rockland County and the seventh largest in New York State. Its 31 square miles extended from the borders of New Jersey to central Rockland. On August 22, 1973, the district was renamed the East Ramapo Central School District.

About the greater East Ramapo community

The District is located in Rockland County, 30 miles northwest of New York City. The County has a strong economy and boasts of highly skilled and educated workforce. The County possesses an eclectic mix of diverse natural, cultural and historical assets as well as retail shopping from boutiques to shopping malls.

Recreational Facilities

There is abundant outdoor space and recreational opportunities. The Town of Ramapo Parks and Recreation Department operates numerous local parks and facilities. The Joseph T. St. Lawrence Community Health and Sports Complex (aka "Torre Valley Recreation Center & Fields") was opened in 2006. It features a turf multi-purpose field with stands to accommodate 1,800 spectators, a separate climate-controlled dome, a 60x40 yard and a turf practice area. It also features three multi-purpose indoor courts, a running track, cardio equipment, weight training machines, two racquetball courts, a computer room, and a dance/aerobic studio. Sports include football, lacrosse, soccer, baseball, and field hockey, as well as year-round sports programs that were not previously available to Ramapo residents. The County also has award-winning golf courses.

The New York Boulders is a professional baseball team based at Clover Stadium just outside the Village of Pomona and is a member of the Frontier League.

Business, Health Care and Higher Education

Major hospitals serving the Town of Ramapo area include Good Samaritan Hospital in Suffern and the nearby Montefiore Nyack Hospital as well as Helen Hayes Hospital. The town also features several community and specialized health centers.

The Town of Ramapo is home to SUNY Rockland Community College, a public, two-year community college located in Suffern. Dominican University New York and St. Thomas Aquinas College are in Orangeburg. Rockland is also home to the Iona University Rockland Campus and Long Island University-Hudson.

Nearby major corporations include Pfizer, a leader in biotechnology and pharmaceuticals, Nice-Pak, the world's largest producer of disposable wipes, and Daikin America, a fluoromaterials manufacturer.

Transportation

There are easy connections to the New York State Thruway (I-87), the Garden State Parkway and the Palisades Interstate Parkway. Public transportation includes the local Transport of Rockland (TOR) bus system, the Hudson Link commuter bus service, the paratransit TRIPS service for seniors and eligible residents with disabilities, and connections to regional services like Rockland Coaches and Metro North and NJ Transit trains.
