Academic Program

Concordia International School Hanoi offers a rigorous, standard based learning college preparatory curriculum based on American standards and bench-marks. All instruction is in English with the exception of world languages. A few students may be assigned to Concordia's EAL program when their demonstrated English skills are one grade or below recommended grade level proficiency, and upon completion of the program they are then eligible to enroll in one of the World Language classes. In addition to classes taught on campus, students have the option to petition to enroll in online courses through Virtual High School. These classes are typically offered when there is a scheduling conflict, when a student is requesting a course that is not on offer in Concordia's curriculum, or when a student is striving to complete a graduation requirement.

Course Explanations

The range of course offerings available at Concordia International School Hanoi has increased as the student population has grown. Please see the explanations below for further information on recent additions to our program

Applied Learning Labs
Applied Learning Labs offer students an intense study of particular interest that results in the production of new knowledge that can be contributed to the relevant discipline. Students may engage in a research project with the goal of submitting a conference paper or paper for journal publication. Students may also develop and host an art show, direct a movie or play, produce a film, or other such knowledge production activities in a focused area of study.

Computer Programing
This rigorous, dual-credit course (in partnership with Concordia University Nebraska) emphasizes computer programming in Python, problem-solving, and effective coding practices. Covering all AP Computer Science A topics and additional material, students build algorithms, implement programs, and complete a comprehensive programming project that prepares them for advanced study in computer science.

MVLA (Multivariable Calculus and Linear Algebra)
A few exceptional mathematics students who complete the AP mathematics curriculum are eligible to take Multivariable Calculus and Linear Algebra, which are advanced math courses that extend beyond the scope of the AP curriculum and are offered as dual enrollment courses in partnership with Concordia University Nebraska.

Independent Research: Science/Social Sciences
This highly advanced research course is available to a select number of students who have demonstrated exceptional academic achievement in science or the social sciences and are committed to engaging in an intensive year long research project under the supervision of a faculty mentor.

Student Wellness
Our comprehensive wellness program integrates physical, emotional, social, career, and life components to support students' overall well-being and equip them with strategies to manage academic and personal challenges.

Character Education and Disciplinary Reporting

Concordia International School Hanoi is a faith-based school committed to developing ethical decision-makers and fostering a strong sense of community. We uphold honest and transparent communication with universities; when a student incurs an out-of-school suspension, the counselor provides appropriate context in recommendation letters, while lesser infractions are addressed at the counselor's discretion.

Class Rank & Grading Scale

- Concordia does not report class rank.
- Only coursework completed at Concordia is used in the calculation of a student's GPA.
- Concordia uses a 4.0 grading scale.
- Concordia does not weight grades for AP, honors, or dual credit courses. Students who meet the prerequisites can take AP and/or dual credit classes.

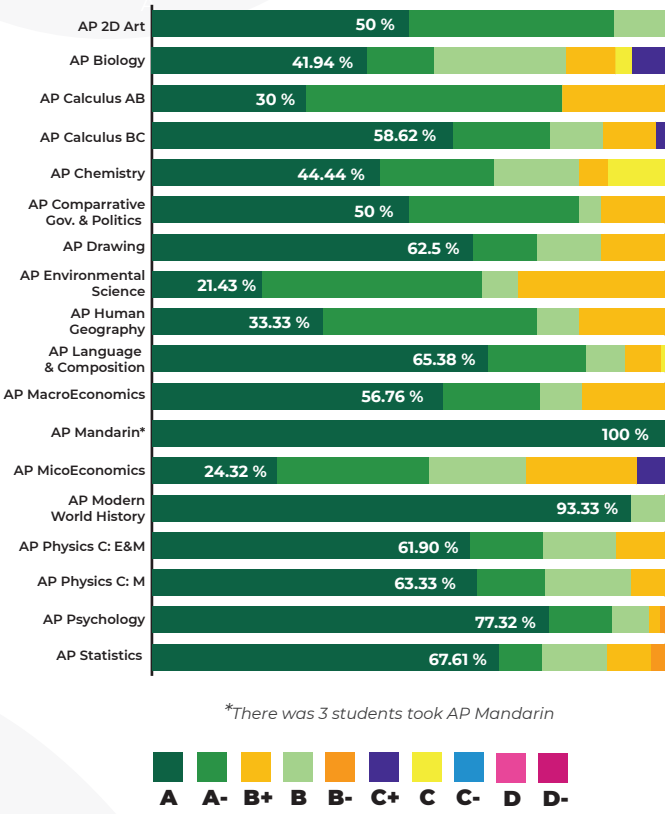

AP Courses Allowed

Students may take a maximum of eight total AP courses over four years. Students with exceptional circumstances may petition school administration for an exception to the AP course limit and peitions are evaluated on a case by case basis.
