Our bread study provides a holistic educational experience that goes beyond simply learning about food. It is important because it integrates several key developmental areas:

- Science and observation: Children learn about physical and chemical changes through the baking process. They observe ingredients transforming from raw materials to finished products, learning about cause and effect (e.g., yeast makes the bread rise).
- Math and literacy skills: Following a recipe requires sequencing, measurement, and an understanding of numbers. Reading books and discussing the process builds vocabulary, comprehension, and narrative skills.
- Cultural understanding: By exploring different types of bread (pita, naan, tortillas, baguettes), children develop an appreciation for global diversity and learn how bread is a staple in countless cultures worldwide.
- Understanding where food comes from: This unit helps children connect the finished product they eat with its origins (wheat fields, bakeries, grocery stores). This fosters an understanding of agriculture, the journey of food to our tables, and the work involved in food production.

Join us for a festive evening featuring a classic holiday film and a decadent hot chocolate bar and snacks! We encourage everyone to wear their cozy clothes and bring their favorite blanket. This is the perfect way to kick off the holiday season with friends and family with some surprise guests!
