5th Grade Update

We had an awesome week in 5th grade! Even with a snow day and a two-hour delay, our students showed incredible focus, enthusiasm, and perseverance. They came ready to learn every day and proved that nothing-weather included-can slow down their momentum. It's been exciting to watch them finish the year strong and continue to take pride in their work.

Looking ahead, we've got a couple of important assessments next week. Students will take their Science test on Monday and Tuesday, and we'll also have a History quiz on the artists of the Renaissance. A little review over the weekend will go a long way in helping them feel confident and prepared. Thanks so much for your support-we're proud of this group and all they're accomplishing!

Due to the snow day the Science test has been postponed until Monday and Tuesday 12.8/9. Please review with your student what is on their study guide and have them talk you through the information

Math Facts

When students become fluent with basic multiplication and division, they can focus more easily on new concepts and problem solving. A few minutes of practice at home each week helps build confidence and keeps their skills sharp as math grows more challenging.
