

Faculty Favorites: Holiday Traditions

By Sophia De Alto

Happy holidays, Thunderbirds! With the holidays approaching, we thought it would be interesting to get some insight on some of the traditions that the staff members partake in in the month of December.

History teacher Mrs. Fogarty has a tradition of baking fifteen different types of cookies with her mother and kids! Isn't that fun! They then give the batches out to some of their friends and family members, then eat the rest. I wonder if she will give out a batch to her government and politics class...hint hint wink wink. I mean, it is the season of giving. Anyway, she says how it is "her favorite part of the holidays."

Senora Kuwent also has a special tradition of opening her Christmas presents at midnight! She says that she enjoyed it more when she was younger, but now she gets to pass the tradition down to her children now! Such a fun idea! This is much better than prying your parents up at 7 a.m. to open them (because I definitely don't do that). Senora also, like others, eats twelve grapes at midnight under the table in hopes of a prosperous year! I hope she gets everything that she wishes for!

Another teacher that has quite a particular holiday tradition is Mrs. Moritz! Mrs. Moritz, who is Polish, has a special routine of opening presents on Christmas Eve instead of Christmas Day. This sounds so fun because then you can spend all day with your new presents! As a Catholic, she also goes to midnight mass to celebrate the birth of baby Jesus. On a similar note, she and her family also do not eat meat as a religious means.

I hope all these teachers enjoy their break, and have fun carrying on their very elaborate traditions! The holiday season is such a beautiful time of year, and I wish everyone a happy holiday, and a New Year of success.

Mrs. Fogarty Celebrates Christmas By Baking Cookies With Her Family

Santa: Man, or Myth...?

By Samantha Sonders

Santa Claus is a mysterious man that goes by many names. Kris Kringle. Saint Nick. Father Christmas. The Really Old Fat Guy That Somehow Broke Into My House...

But which of these names is his true persona? Who is the man that lies behind the fluffy white beard, and the soulless, sparkling eyes? Why doesn't he age? How is his skin so clear? What is his skin-care routine?!? Are the elves unionized? When will I ever stop asking rhetorical questions?

The Man Himself

In this issue of the Tom-Tom, I embark to hunt down Santa's actual identity, and expose his conniving ways using facts and logic...

To begin, I must first assert my grievances over all that Santa has done to offend me. One: he annual-

Continued on page #5

Winter Activities

Ice skating, watching movies, baking, volunteering, and having fun in the snow are all great ways to celebrate this festive season! Page #3

Popular Picks: Holiday Movies

The Tom-Tom polled students on the best holiday flicks. Page #2

Winter Chorus Concert

This past month, the chorus put on a wonderful holiday-themed concert. Page #4

School Nurse Toy Drive

Ms. Storms is holding a holiday toy drive. Page #4

Winter Olympics

By Valentina Moreno and Megan Sokolov

The 2026 Winter Olympics, also known as the Milano Cortina 2026, will feature many new events that aim to bring excitement and fairness to all athletes. The biggest new sport that will be introduced is ski mountaineering, known as “skimo” which will be added to the Olympics for the very first time in over 20 years. Ski mountaineering is a sport in which athletes race and climb up and down mountain courses, demonstrating strength, speed, and ability. In addition, the Olympic events will include a men’s sprint, a women’s sprint, and a mixed relay. Other new events are being added to sports that have already existed in the Games. For example, dual moguls for both men and women will include skiers racing next to each other, which will attract more viewers through the athletes actions and durability. Women’s large hill ski jumping and women’s doubles luge will expand opportunities for all female athletes. As well as, mixed team skeletons which feature a male and female athlete, from the same nation, competing and racing together in a relay where both of their times determine a winner, portraying individual skill and also team strategy. Fans are looking forward to these new additions and improvements that attempt to create a more fair and entertaining Winter Olympics for all.

The 2026 Winter Olympics

Is Netflix Buying Warner Bros?

By Gloria Zhan

Recently, there has been news of both Netflix and Paramount offering to buy Warner Bros. After rejecting the offer for a complete takeover by Paramount, Warner Bros agreed to the offer posed by Netflix as of December 5th, 2025. However, Paramount could still return with another offer, so the deal is not completely finalized yet. Let’s analyze the history behind this event and what it will entail for us consumers...

Warner Bros Discovery has experienced some negative mergers with other companies, leaving it with $53 billion dollars in debt as of 2022. Also, the company switched into the entertainment industry without a business plan, leading to the replay of old movies, ultimately continuing to devalue the company. Although the company was still able to thrive due to its reputation and containment of iconic entertainment, the debt constantly left issues for the company.

Paramount previously offered a $108 billion dollar bid to takeover Warner Bros completely. The proposed deal with Netflix is only for Warner Bros’ film and streaming business. The Warner Bros board almost unanimously chose Netflix’s deal, believing it will serve in their best interest. They believe it is well financed and will offer better long term value for shareholders.

As for Netflix, receiving the film and streaming business for Warner Bros will give them access to Warner Bros’ vast content areas and gain access to those shows and movies for their subscribers. If Warner Bros agrees with Netflix’ offer, they would sell their television networks (CNN and TNT) into a separate company before the takeover is complete.

It is predicted that the battle for who takes over Warner Bros will take a few months to resolve.

Netflix and Warner Bros

Warner Bros Movies

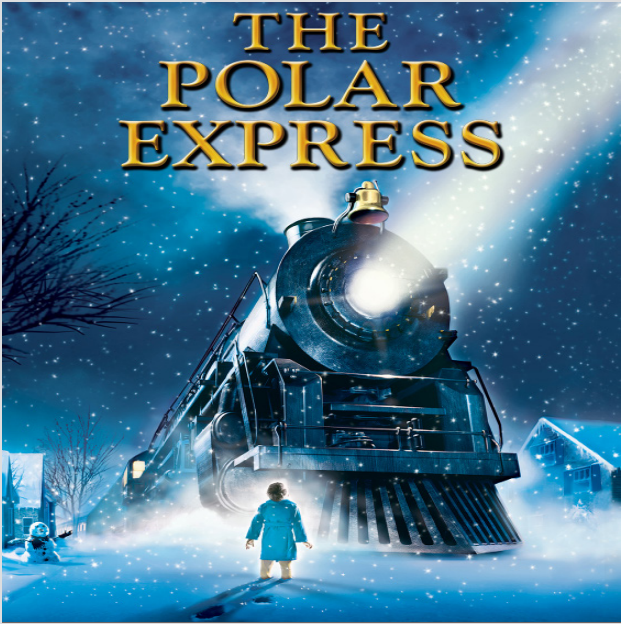

Popular Picks: Holiday Movies

By Abigail O’Malley

Hello, Mahwah Thunder-Birds! The holiday season is approaching, and with that comes the nostalgic holiday movies. With the help of the students from Mahwah High School, we have our top five favorite holiday movies!

Movie #1: Coming in first is the classic, Home Alone! Home Alone is the top pick of our Mahwah High School students. In this movie, the main character, Kevin, was accidentally left behind at home by his family during their Christmas vacation. Kevin was enjoying his time alone until he encountered two neighborhood burglars who were trying to break into his house. While Kevin was setting up traps to catch the burglars, he got over his fear of his next-door neighbor and became friendly with him before his family’s return. This movie is a staple and truly brings a nostalgic Christmas energy to the holiday season.

Movie #2: Second, we have The Polar Express! The Polar Express is a family-friendly movie. The main character in The Polar Express, Chris, is slowly losing hope in Santa Claus. In the middle of the night, a magical train appears in Chris’s front yard, and he boards the train. The train brings him and several other kids to the North Pole. Chris meets Santa and the elves at the North Pole, which gives him back his faith and hope in Santa. Watching The Polar Express is the perfect way to get into the Christmas spirit!

The Polar Express

Movie #3 and #4: Coming in at a tie we have The Grinch and Elf. Both of these movies are Christmas classics and really set the Christmas tone during the holiday season. In the movie, The Grinch, the main character, Grinch, and his devoted dog, Max, live inside a cave on Mount Crumpet. The Grinches’ hate towards Christmas grows bigger once Whoville starts increasing their Christmas spirit. The Grinch and Max set up a plan to destroy Christmas once and for all, but it fails. The movie, The Grinch, shows how

Continued on page #4

Winter Activities

By Emilia Cole

As the festive season draws near, it is not uncommon to see students have some free time on their hands and want to make optimal use of it during winter break. Though it may be chilly outside, encouraging opportunities abound during this period. In that regard, here are five fun things that could assist those at your school to make optimal use of it.

Ice Skating - Whether at the local ice rink or at a frozen pond in the backyard, ice skating is a time-honored winter activity. It's an excellent means of getting some exercise and enjoying the frigid air with fellow friends. Newcomers can use the bars for support, and advanced skaters can opt for spins or races.

Holiday Movie Marathon - Spending time with friends or family members for a home movie night is one of the best ways to relax and spend the evening. Whether it is classic movies such as Home Alone or some newer ones, a themed movie marathon would be a memorable experience because it would involve munching popcorn and sipping hot chocolate during the movies.

Baking Seasonal Treats - Winter break is a great time to work with your kids in the kitchen and try some experimentation. You can make cookies, gingerbread houses, and even cupcakes to pass out to your neighbors and friends to make them happy for the holidays.

Volunteering in the Community - Giving back happens in some form during the holiday season. Volunteering in food drives, shelters, or other charities in the community is an excellent opportunity for the students to give back. It could be as simple as making cards for the elderly in nursing homes; it would certainly bring them joy.

Outdoor Fun in the Snow - If there is good weather, there is nothing like making snowmen, snowball fights, or sliding down hills on sleds to capture the essence of this season. To some extent, these activities mean having fun, which also involves some exercises.

The holidays are much more than a school break; they are opportunities to unwind and enjoy. Whether ice-skating, baking, giving back to the community, or simply enjoying a movie night, all of these activities help the students tap into the wonders that occur within the winter season. Now, bundle up with your friends and make some memories that will last a lifetime!

Watching Home Alone Is A Classic Way To Get Into The Christmas Spirit

Mahwah High School's Drama Club's Wish List

By Evan Lerman

Mahwah High School's Drama Club has always had an influential role in the school's culture. And having recently completed their play "Done to Death" and already getting ready for the musical, many both in and outside the club are looking forward to the holiday season. So for those who have friends inside the school's club, we compiled a list of what our school's future Broadway stars want for the Holidays.

Out of the 20 students who responded, there was an incredible amount of diversity visible in different people's responses, with a total of 21 gifts being requested. We have grouped them up into 4 categories in hopes that they can help you on your own Christmas search for the theater freaks close to you! And even if you haven't started your hunt for gifts just yet, I encourage you to stick around regardless. There may be some responses that intrigue you!

#4: Time with the Special People

There's nothing more special about the holiday season than its ability to bring people together. No matter how far away family members may live from each other, the holiday season almost never fails in dragging them together from halfway across the country, and sometimes the world, to spend a special day with the people they care about most. It's truly incredible; so incredible, that 3 of our 20 respondents listed time with the special people in their lives as the present they want the most from their holiday season. Out of these 3, two of them listed time with their family as their desired gift, and the last of them listed a "kiss from their crush" as their desired gift. So know that even if you can't afford any presents, you just being with the people who love you may just be what they want the most.

That being said, we still live in a capitalistic society in which materialism is heavily encouraged, so if that last line made you cringe, maybe it's best you keep reading.

#3: Old Fashioned Tech

One of the most intriguing trends to emerge in the data collected from this poll was a noticeable resurgence in popularity for items that many consider to be outdated, and have their function replaced by "New Tech" which does their job more efficiently. Yet regardless of this, it seems that at least in MHS's theater department, there is a significant number of people who still find use in this "Old Tech" however, as a total of 3 people requested an item from this category for the holiday season above all others. Two of these three listed vinyl records as their most requested gifts, with both of them expressing a desire to either start a collection or expand one, and our last respondent requested a digital camera.

So if you have someone in your life who is into collecting old fashioned tech, consider checking out Vinyl Addiction Records located in Arlington, NJ! It's about a 40 minute drive from Mahwah, but it's filled

Third On The List, Students Wished for Old Fashioned Tech

Continued on page #5

Popular Picks: Holiday Movies (cont.)

nothing can ruin the true Christmas spirit. Our second contestant for the tiebreaker is the movie Elf. This popular Christmas movie exhibits the true magical spirit that is felt on Christmas day. The main character, Buddy, is on the search for his biological father in NYC. The Christmas spirit in this movie is shown through the uplifting New York City atmosphere and the hope of finding his father. Buddy meets his biological father, gets a job in New York City and finally feels like he belongs. Both of these classics show the true authentic Christmas spirit and are fan favorites to our Mahwah High School students.

Movie #5: Coming in at number five, we have A Charlie Brown Christmas! This movie was created in 1965 and is still revered. In the movie, Charlie Brown is a young but melancholy boy who tries to find the Christmas spirit by directing the school's play. One of his friends, Linus, reads a story that inspires them to decorate a small tree for Christmas. While decorating this tree, Charlie realized that Christmas isn't just about the gifts but about the love that comes from this holiday. A Charlie Brown Christmas accurately shows the meaning of Christmas and is the perfect movie to watch with family for the holiday season.

A Charlie Brown Christmas

Miracle On 34th Street

In addition to our top five favorite Christmas movies, Mr. Pascal's all-time favorite Christmas movie is Miracle On 34th Street. This is Mr. Pascal's favorite holiday movie because it depicts how strong belief and hope truly is. To get into the Christmas spirit, Mr. Pascal decorates his house with lights and different Christmas decorations. Some things that Mr. Pascal does this to get into the holiday spirit by decorating his house, having all his family over for a big Italian Christmas dinner, and going to the ice cream shop, Nastos, with his kids and family. Thank you, Mr. Pascal, for your input on the holiday season.

The Tom-Tom wishes all of you a happy holiday!

Winter Chorus Concert

By Keira Sarkissian

Every year, the Mahwah High School winter concert is performed in December, showcasing our talented Thunderbird musicians, and this year blew typical standards out of the park. A night full of notable pieces and exciting performances, this concert was a resounding success, particularly for our Concert Choir, conducted by Ms. Morneweck-Fuld. These 67 students spent countless zero periods working on musical technique and vocabulary to apply to their music, and for a whopping 19 of them, this was their first ever winter concert, making this even more of an achievement.

Similar to each year, the winter concert focuses on selections with themes around winter weather and the upcoming holiday season. The different choir ensembles sang six pieces in total, three belonging to each respective theme. "The First Breath of Winter, arranged by Phyllis Wolfe White, uses specific musical techniques and imagery to convey the beauty of wintertime weather, and, according to Ms. Morneweck-Fuld, was "a nice contrast to all the other pieces." It's gentle and slow, which means it requires all the more precision to perform. "Wintertime Cheer," by Jay Althouse, is in the style of an English madrigal (or carol) and has a similar theme with a completely different tone. With interesting texture and percussive "fa-la-la" lines—alongside a literal percussion solo—this song demonstrates the excitement buzzing around wintertime. The treble choir, featuring just the sopranos and altos, sang an arrangement of notable poet Robert Frost's piece "Stopping by the Woods on a Snowy Evening," a song that paints a picture with the title

Continued on page #7

Hinei Mah Tov (How Good and Joyous)

הנה מה טוב

Hebrew Folk song

Hinei Mah Tov, A Featured Song

School Nurse Toy Drive

By Mira Matveeva

This winter the club of Future Medical Professionals under the leadership of Mahwah High School Nurse Ms. Storms were able to go through with a great way to get back to the community – toy drive. Student were able to collect around a hundred of all different toys over the term of November and December and donated them for the kids under care of the Home Health in Saddle Brook, NJ, where Ms. Storms used to work as a nurse manager prior to joining us at Mahwah. This organization takes care of various kids with a variety of complex health situations, where sometimes they would require a nurse with them at all times, as they are homebound, others require a nurse following them at school. Through managing cases of about 40 kids since 2020 Ms. Storms got really attached to the families and kids,

Boxes Of Toys Have Already Been Donated

and when the opportunity to involve the club she recently took under her wing and her new community into her past life she did not want to miss it. This amazing opportunity for the community service appeared for Future Medical Professionals students after Ms. Storms has reached out to the director she used to work with before.

Ms. Storms cannot emphasize enough how full her heart felt when she saw how generous the Mahwah Community was, filling up her car to its capacity with the hopes and gifts for the kids that might need it the most. It took her and her 11 year old daughter at least six trips to be able to bring everything into the health office where the toys were donated. Now the nurse managers will be distributing all of those toys to the families from Bergen all the way to Hudson counties, where in some of the places those donated toys can be the only ones that children may get during this holiday season.

After seeing the incredible success of this year, Ms. Storms hopes to be able to continue this action next year as well, carrying on the idea of being generous and caring, traits that are particularly important especially in this time of year.

The Toy Drive Has Been Successful So far

Mahwah High School’s Drama Club’s Wishlist (cont.)

with positive reviews almost universally, perfect for the Vinyl collectors in your life. Or, if you don’t feel like driving or are looking for a less specific kind of retro tech, consider checking out Retrospekt, an online store which specializes in selling old fashioned tech of all kinds, ranging from digital cameras, and even portable cassette players!

#2: Fashion

Perhaps unsurprisingly, one of the most popular gifts that teens in the MHS drama club want this year is clothing, with a total of 5 people requesting fashion related items for the holiday season. Of those 5, 4 of them were directly requesting clothing, and 1 was for a new watch. This makes clothing the single most requested item out of all the items on the poll. So if you’re in doubt about what to buy your kids this holiday season, chances are good that you can’t go wrong with some nice looking clothing. After all, even if they aren’t particularly into fashion, everyone likes to look nice every once in a while.

So if you think that a new shirt may actually be at the top of your loved one’s Christmas list for once, consider checking out Topsy Elves for some nice Christmas themed clothing or an ugly sweater. Or if you’re in the market for something more general, Nordstrom is a reliable seller that has both a physical and online store which specializes in all elements of fashion.

Honorable Mentions

In this section of the article, I would like to take a moment to document all the miscellaneous items that people requested on the poll that don’t fit into any of the trending categories documented. Using items in these categories as a means to inform what to buy for your theater friends is unadvised due to their lack of relation to any significant trends, but we thought they were still worth listing regardless, just to make sure every response is given proper documentation.

Anything involving theater - This was a second response provided by one of our respondents, who was the only person to list more than one desired gift. But regardless, it makes sense that the theater kids would want something theater related.

A Dog - Animals are amazing, especially dogs, which are better than cats in almost every conceivable way. Good on this respondent for recognizing that!

Towel Warmer - A bit of niche request, but definitely worth it if you like to take frequent baths or just swim a lot. Personally though? I think I’ll stick to drying them the old fashioned way.

Ice Skates - Personally, skating isn’t my thing. But I applaud those who do try it! It’s a very eloquent sport, one that I personally lack the eloquence to engage in.

Lego Cars - Ah... To be young again! I loved playing with toy vehicles when I was a kid, especially trains and such. Now if only someone could make a working, life sized lego car, and got legal approval to drive it, that would be amazing!

#1: New Tech

I don’t think this result comes as a surprise to anyone, of course technology is one of the most popular items that people want this year! I highly doubt that anyone reading this was surprised by this category taking the number one spot. Although it was technically tied with the fashion category, both having 5 respondents requesting items associated with it, the decision was made to put New Tech at the top of the list regardless due to the popularity of the “Old Tech” category, which technically could have been merged with new tech to make a much more clear winner in the form of a singular “Technology” category. With that being said however, the desired gifts that fall into this category which were listed by our respondents were quite diverse! With the singular most requested item being headphones with a total of two respondents requesting them. The other items were an art tablet, a new phone, and more cloud storage, all with one respondent for each request.

So, if you’re in the market to buy someone close to you some tech for the holiday season, LG Electronics specializes in home electronics, like TVs, Laptops, and even laundry machines! As for more general stores, Amazon, Best Buy, and Target are all quite popular brands that will almost certainly have what you’re looking for. Or if all else fails, you can always feed more money to the absolute monopoly that is the Apple corporation.

And that marks the end of the MHS Drama Club’s holiday wishlist! We hope that if you have any drama dorks in your that are close to you, this article helped you in your search for gifts! Or if nothing else, you at least got some enjoyment from reading about what they all wanted for Christmas this year. Now, this article has reached its end, what are you waiting for? It’s time to start shopping!

Santa: Man, or Myth...? (cont.)

ly trespasses into my house, and instead of leaving presents he kind of just sits there for an hour and leaves. It’s really unnerving. One time I caught him and I shined a flashlight in his eyes and he hissed and skittered away. It reminded me of some sort of large cockroach. I don’t really know if grown men usually do that. Is Santa even a man...?

Two: he keeps not putting me on either the naughty or nice list. In fact, he made up an entirely new third list for me called the “meh” list. Rather than gifts or coal I end up getting motivational cat calendars (you’re purrfect) and sticky notes that say “atleast you tried” in really poor handwriting. They also come two days late in the mail from UPS. I wouldn’t mind if I wasn’t the only one, but it seems that this is a phenomenon unique to me. And I’ve now interpreted this to be an act of war. Thus, with my reasoning aside, I can now get into the nitty gritty of just what creature Santa is. Let’s start with the basics. Santa lives in the North Pole, surrounded entirely by small little people that seem to be an entirely different species from humans. He is completely cut off from humanity (unless he’s in league with foreign governments... I wouldn’t be surprised), and also is wholly self sufficient. This means the society he has created must be quite advanced. He must have elves delegated to jobs not just in toy making (doesn’t Temu just take care of that now?) but also in more realistic positions such as farming, building, defense... There might be different socioeconomic classes of elves. Perhaps theres a higher class, comprised of those who design the concepts of toys-- those who are scholars, who run the intricacies of daily life in the North Pole. I mean, Santa’s workshop is essentially a factory; there must be people at the top who oversee it. Santa’s only one man... And Santa sits all the way at the top. He doesn’t have to do any of the hard manual labor the elves do, day in and day out. What does he even do when it’s not Christmas Eve? I’ll tell you: he kicks back, enjoys a hot-coca on the rocks, and benefits off the toil of his elves. He’s an absolute free rider. Who’s to say he even pays them? Or gives them health insurance? Paid sick leave?! Is this beginning to sound like someone familiar? Based off of all the data I have collected, there can only be one true answer as to who Santa, if he can be called that, truly is... That’s right, Santa Claus is Jeff Bezos with a fake beard and a really big pillow tucked under his shirt. There’s simply no other possible explanation for who this man could be. It makes sense, think about it: Bezos manufactures all of the toys in secret, hiding it under the guise of the workings of the North Pole-- and then, he transports the toys to his numerous Amazon warehouses, where he then hits to replenish his gift sack on his journey throughout the world. It also explains the immortality. I wish I could say I told you so, but I actually didn’t tell you anything, and I’m just as astonished as you are. This Christmas, when Kris Kringle comes knocking on your chimney, don’t call your parents, call the cops. It’s Jeff Bezos in a really cool costume, and believe me, you don’t want him under your tree.

Holiday Break Plans

By Mira Matveeva

Christmas is just around the corner, and while students cannot wait for this final hour before the long-needed winter break, staff and teachers in the school are just as excited for it, with their own plans and enthusiasm.

While the break will bring a possibility for students to finally catch on to sleep, that seems to be forgotten in the time of test heavy weeks, it is also a great opportunity to spend quality time with your friends and family, which is exactly what a lot of the faculty plans on doing. As Mr. Nelson describes his busy plans, he already has his days planned out. Other than taking a ‘big long break,’ Mr. Nelson plans to go to his friend’s catch up on a lot of personal projects along the way. His idea of the break is strongly supported by Ms. Backlemun, who is planning to visit who’s excited to “get away from Mahwah for a little bit,” but in the best way possible, to see his brothers, one from London, second in Carolina.

Some teachers, on the other hand, decide to take a little more adventurous break. As Mr. Nahum quotes, his holidays can be described by “a man, a plan, a canal, Panama,” one should decode this cipher by themselves. Mr. Castro supported that spirit as well, with his plans by going to New York and visiting some museums in between meeting and spending time with his family as well.

Whether you decide to explore your horizons or stay at home and get well-deserved rest, the staff of the Tom-Tom wishes all Thunderbirds to have a great break and happy holidays!

The Big Apple Is Very Festive This Time Of Year

house for christmas eve and his son’s for the Christmas day, and her family and spent time with her sister from Chicago, and Mr. Hicks,

North Carolina, and meeting with the family in the middle – South

The Tom-Tom Hopes Everyone Had A Happy Break!

Winter Chorus Concert (cont.)

alone. A man contemplates continuing on his journey, going through with his promises to meet someone, or to just rest in the snowy forest, succumbing to rest. Winter truly is a beautiful time of year, and these songs all reflected that idea perfectly.

The other pieces focused on the wintertime holidays and featured some more notable carols, like the medley between “Happy Holidays” and “White Christmas,” two famous pieces by Jewish composer Irving Berlin. They’re two songs that “everybody should know,” both from the 1942 classic musical “Holiday Inn” starring Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire. These well-known songs certainly got the audience (and choir alike) in a festive mood for the winter break, and they were selected so singers would notice how popular these songs truly ly are during the wintertime. The entire choir also sang “Hiney Ma Tov,” an upbeat and fun Hebrew piece celebrating the joy of having loved ones together to celebrate Hanukkah. “Hiney Ma Tov” has been a favorite of past choirs, and is always a piece that is equally exciting to perform as it is to listen to. The tenor & bass choir sang the ever-popular “Feliz Navidad,” alternating between lyrics in Spanish and English, and singing it with just as much excitement as that song deserves. All in all, this was another rousing success from the Mahwah Concert Choir, and make sure to see all their talents at the upcoming coffee house and spring concert!

The Concert Chorus Performing

Tom-Tom Contributor's Box

Advisor: Mr. Jankowski

Editor-in-Chiefs: Emilia Cole and Samantha Sonders

Layout Editors: Samantha Sonders and Gloria Zhan

Staff: Emilia Cole, Sophia De Alto, Evan Lerman, Mira Matveeva, Valentina Moreno, Abigail O'Malley, Keira Sarkissian, Megan Sokolov, Samantha Sonders, Gloria Zhan

Follow us on Instagram @mhs_tomtom for future updates and