

January 22, 2026

Dear Cheltenham School District Community,

With a major winter storm forecasted for Sunday into Monday, we are writing to give you an update on our inclement weather plans:

- Monday, January 26: If weather conditions require us to close district schools and offices, we will have a traditional snow day for all students and staff, and transportation will not be provided.
- Tuesday, January 27: Decision on this day will be determined after we've had the opportunity to assess the conditions in and around our schools.
- Wednesday, December 28: If conditions are significant enough to close schools and offices, we will have a Flexible Instruction Day (FID).
 - In the event of a FID, building principals will send detailed instructions to all families. Please direct any questions regarding the details of the flexible instruction day to your child's building principal.
 - As a reminder, all students are advised to bring their Chromebook home on Friday.

Understanding Remote Instruction

A FID is remote learning, combining synchronous (live) and asynchronous (flexible) instruction to ensure continuous and meaningful learning for all students during days when physical school sites must close due to weather.

Remote teaching utilizes a strategic blend of synchronous and asynchronous activities. For clarity, please note the two types of learning activities:

- Synchronous Learning: This is live, real-time instruction where students and teachers interact simultaneously. This often takes place via a video conference call.
- Asynchronous Learning: This is flexible learning where students complete assignments at their convenience. Content, such as pre-recorded videos, readings, or written activities, is provided for students to engage with outside of live class time.

Below, please see building schedules and information for accessing assignments during a FID.
