Covering the costs of college

A checklist for saving

If you're like most loving parents, you want to give your kids the opportunity to attend the schools they want. College isn't getting any cheaper, but there are many funding options to help you get the most from your money. And you can rely on your Northwestern Mutual advisor to show you the right ways to make it happen.

Your advisor will listen closely and ask deeper questions to uncover blind spots and identify opportunities others often overlook. Then they'll design a personalized plan to help give your family the most flexibility now, and later.

of parents saving for college expect to cover the majority of the cost for their children.¹

Consider a variety of ways to pay for college.

- ☐ 529 plan — You could open this type of tax-advantaged account to save for your child's educational costs from kindergarten to graduate school. A 529 plan offers tax-free growth, and as long as you use the money for qualified educational expenses, withdrawals are tax free.
- ☐ Coverdell ESA — Similar to a 529 savings plan, this tax-advantaged account can be used to save for educational expenses. But there are income limits in order to contribute to a Coverdell ESA.
- ☐ UTMA/UGMA accounts — These are custodial accounts that are sometimes used for college savings, though they don't offer the same tax benefits as a 529 plan. You manage the funds for your child until your child reaches the state's age of majority (usually between ages 18 to 21). At that time, your child takes over and has full access to the assets in the account and can enjoy penalty-free withdrawals to use for any purpose.
- ☐ Roth IRA — If you have a Roth IRA, you can use contributions to pay for qualified education expenses without tax or penalties. Once contributions are depleted, earnings are considered taxable income even if used for qualified education expenses.

Protect your family and accumulate value.²

- ☐ Financial protection for your family will give you peace of mind knowing your loved ones will be able to pay for college and all their household expenses, even if the unexpected happens and you're not there. Consider permanent life insurance. These policies offer a death benefit and accumulates value² over time and can be used for any reason, including to help pay college expenses.

² Utilizing the cash value through policy loans, surrenders, or cash withdrawals will reduce the death benefit; and may necessitate greater outlay than anticipated and/or result in an unexpected taxable event.

Get your child involved.

- ☐ Do the math. Figure out how much college will cost and determine what you can afford and which expenses you expect to cover. Help your child make wise choices about degree programs and public versus private schools.
- ☐ Look for other resources. Think about student loan programs, such as government loans that don't need to be repaid until your child is out of school.
- ☐ Pursue financial aid options. Encourage your child to work with you to research grants, scholarships, and work-study programs available on campus.
- ☐ Make sure your teen has skin in the game. Letting your child know they share in the responsibility of their education can help them realize the importance of maintaining good grades and graduating on time.

Consider your goals, too.

- ☐ Keep retirement and other goals on your radar. Your advisor can help you plan so you don't compromise your long-term goals to pay for college.
- ☐ Compare the features of each type of account. Because there are many choices to consider, your advisor will review each option and how you, grandparents, aunts, and uncles can contribute to your child's future.
- ☐ Consider investing according to time horizon. As your child approaches their college years, your advisor can help you optimize your investment allocation, so you maintain the balance of stability, growth and income you want to achieve.
