Reading

We will begin February with a realistic fiction genre study. Students will enjoy books that mirror their own lives, with characters their age experiencing relatable life situations.

We will also be exploring books and stories by well-known African American authors and illustrators in celebration of Black History Month!

Math

We just finished up unit 2 and started unit 4. This unit covers a lot of information. We are starting with measurement and then going into geometry. It's a fun unit and the students will be using rulers and protractors!

Sci/SS

In Science, we have been talking about how to classify plants and animals. This month, we will begin discussions about behavioral adaptations of plants and animals and how that helps them survive in their environment.

In social studies, we have been discussing the economy. Producers and consumers, goods and services and assembly lines and their impact on our economy. We will continue this month with the basics of how businesses are run and how they make a profit.
