Teacher of the Year!

Congratulations to Jennie Herrmann – the Auburn Mountainview High School Teacher of the Year.

Jennie is an exceptional educator who ensures every student feels seen, supported, and empowered. With patience and dignity, she guides learners through challenges while creating a classroom culture where students are motivated to grow. Her teaching extends far beyond four walls—integrating environmental stewardship, community partnerships, and hands-on learning. From studying salmon migration and gardening to donating plants to Auburn Food Bank families and collaborating with local farmers to support district nutrition services, some of the produce is used by child nutrition services in our schools. Jennie connects learning to real-world impact. She also leads students on college and community-based field trips to explore careers in agriculture and the trades, while expanding the agriculture program to include new courses, internships, and immersive projects. As a Green Team leader working with the King County Green Schools program and a dedicated mentor to colleagues, Jennie is a lifelong learner and an inspiring role model for both students and staff.
