The Richmond County School System to operate normally on January 23, 2026

(AUGUSTA, GEORGIA) – As weather forecasts continue to develop, Richmond County School System is closely monitoring potential impacts and working with local and regional emergency officials and the National Weather Service to stay informed about current and projected conditions. Based on the latest information available, schools and offices will operate on a normal schedule tomorrow, Friday, January 23.

While no decision has been made for next week, families should be aware that schools are preparing for the possibility of a Learn From Home day on Monday, January 26, should weather conditions require it. Students will take home their district-issued devices in preparation for a potential asynchronous learning day.

Updates will continue to be shared on the district's inclement weather landing page, social media channels, the Infinite Campus Parent Portal, and through local media outlets. An update regarding Monday's operations will be provided no later than 7 p.m. on Saturday.
