

Elizabeth “Libby” Beisner

Mrs. Beisner graduated from Bowling Green State University and spent her thirty-year career at Hopewell-Loudon teaching kindergarten. Many alumni can recall their earliest school memories as being members of Mrs. Beisner’s class. As a kindergarten teacher she did her best to welcome those little faces to her classroom, and prepared them by providing them with a quality educational foundation for the rest of their school years. As the title of the book by Robert Falgham, “All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten” signifies, many adults today can attribute what they really need to know to Mrs. Beisner. Besides serving her students, Libby also mentored many teachers; she introduced and implemented many reading and math programs; and in 2001, she was nominated and accepted into Who’s Who in Education.
