Ohio law now requires schools to share important health information with families of elementary students.

The Ohio Department of Health (ODH) has created materials to help parents, guardians, and educators learn about Type 1 diabetes—including what it is, common warning signs, and when to seek medical advice. These materials are being shared to help families recognize symptoms early and support children's health.

- Ohio Revised Code 3707.61 requires ODH to create informational materials on Type 1 diabetes.

- Ohio Revised Code 3313.7118 requires every public and chartered nonpublic elementary school to provide these materials—either electronically or in print—to parents or guardians when a child enrolls in elementary school.

We have attached the Type 1 Diabetes Informational Materials from ODH for you to review. Please take a few minutes to look over this important information. Early awareness can make a big difference in keeping children healthy.
