PASSAGE V

The Sociable Weavers' Complex Nest

In the sparse yet relatively green environment of the Kalahari Desert, birds known as sociable weavers build their enormous nests atop the desert's signature camelthorn trees. Slung across the branches, each nest—which can measure up to thirteen feet wide and seven feet thick—is a sprawling community home to hundreds of birds. [36]

F. specific information that illustrates the minimum height at which the weavers begin building their nests.
G. specific information that underscores the enormousness of the weavers' nests.
H. details that clarify how the weavers are able to survive in the Kalahari Desert.
