OFFICIAL PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT

NATIONAL MRS. SUCHORSKI APPRECIATION WEEK HAS BEEN DECLARED

Dear Mrs. Suchorski,

First and foremost, we owe you the most dramatic, theatrical, deeply heartfelt apology in the history of apologies. The fact that you were not included in our original Love Letter Blog Post is nothing short of a tragedy. A scientific anomaly. A glitch in the universe. Truly, it defies logic — and you are the science teacher, so you know how serious that is. So today, we are officially declaring this week:

✨ NATIONAL MRS. SUCHORSKI APPRECIATION WEEK ✨

Because honestly? There has never been a teacher more deserving.

From 6th grade all the way through high school, the Class of 2027 has had the absolute privilege of being in your classroom. That is not just luck - that is a blessing. We could not have chosen a better person to guide us through labs, life lessons, questionable group projects, and the chaos that is middle school transitioning into high school.

You are the SWEETEST human being to ever exist.

Sweeter than any chemical compound we've studied. Kinder than the laws of physics. More consistent than gravity itself. Your patience? Unmatched. Your encouragement? Life-changing. Your ability to explain things multiple times without losing your mind? Nobel Prize worthy. Speaking personally -this is Ember Dutcher speaking- you have always been my favorite teacher. Always. You've supported me, encouraged me, and made science class something I genuinely looked forward to. You've made school feel safe and welcoming and steady for years, and that means more than you probably know.

Now. We must address the elephant in the room.

The omission was NOT intentional. It was NOT malicious. It was NOT reflective of our feelings. It was, quite frankly, the result of Ms. Wilson's completely chaotic decision-making process. As the self-appointed editor-in-chief of forgetting important people, she somehow (against all odds and common sense) failed to include one of the most important teachers in our entire academic journey.

*We cannot explain it. We cannot justify it. We can only apologize for it.
(And gently suggest that Ms. Wilson may need a scientific evaluation.)*

Mrs. Suchorski, please know that you are adored, appreciated, respected, and loved by the whole school. You have shaped our education for years. You've put up with us since we were awkward 11-year-olds with messy binders and zero lab skills. You've watched us grow up. And you've done it all with kindness, grace, and that warm smile that makes everything feel okay.

So this week - and honestly every week - we celebrate you.

Thank you for your patience.

Thank you for your dedication.

Thank you for being the constant in our academic chaos.

Thank you for being YOU.

With overwhelming appreciation, dramatic sincerity, and just the right amount of brown-nosing,

The Yearbook Class

(Especially Ember Dutcher 🧡)
