A Transfer Pathway: West-MEC Culinary to U of A Nutritional Science

Explore a seamless pathway from the West-MEC Culinary Program to a B.S. in Nutritional Sciences & Wellness through dual enrollment and AP courses.

The University of Arizona's B.S. in Nutritional Sciences and Wellness provides you with hands-on learning and access to cutting-edge research, developing the expertise needed to promote healthy lifestyles, manage client diets, and advance public health initiatives.

Degrees in nutritional science prepare you for careers and graduate programs at the intersection of science, food, health and medicine such as:

- Health Care: Careers in patient care, administration, and research focused on public health.
- Public Policy & Health: Shape nutrition policies at the local, state, and federal levels.
- Education & Research: Advance nutrition knowledge through teaching and research.
- Food Science: Improve food quality, safety, and production.

Through a four-way partnership between West-MEC, Maricopa Community Colleges, the College Board (AP), and the University of Arizona, a Nutritional Sciences degree is more accessible and timely, helping limit college debt and providing a faster way forward for students.
