FROM THE EDITOR

As we wrap up the Fall trimester, we are marveling at the creativity of our students these past three months. Our ceramics students have kept Erika busy at the helm of her kiln, firing hundreds of projects. Opening the kiln lid is like unwrapping a surprise gift. Kelli has been hard at work teaching students how to develop film and create prints, along with helping them to learn about how to use their cameras for the best results. Brian and his crew have been working diligently to produce video projects. Jen and her students are creating great things in the idea lab. Drawing and Painting students continue to amaze Kirby with their talent and originality.

Enjoy the end-of-trimester issue with the addition of work that students are creating on their own, as they share work created outside the classroom.

The Photo 1 and Photo 2 have had a very creative trimester, spending time with their cameras and observing the unobserved. I asked them to look for discarded overlooked objects or scenes and, by using the rules of composition and lighting, make them appear interesting and beautiful. They roamed the streets of Lambertville and even the 'nooks and crannies' (Scottish colloquialism) of campus to see what they could find. I hope you enjoy their findings and appreciate how skilled these young artists are.

are working diligently in the classroom on their projects, but many are also passionate about their personal artwork.

We asked them to share what they are creating in their own time, and we hope you will love the results as much as we do!
