An aerial photograph of a large-scale construction project for a school building. The building is a complex of several interconnected rectangular structures. Some parts of the building have dark grey exterior walls, while others are still under construction, showing the steel framework and blue roof panels. A large construction crane is positioned on the left side of the building. The surrounding area includes a parking lot filled with cars, various construction materials like pipes and lumber stacked on the ground, and a baseball field visible in the background. The sky is clear and blue.
