

Helping Siblings Connect: Supporting Positive Interactions at Home

When a child has special needs, brothers and sisters often want to play and spend time together, but may not always know how. Please join us for a short workshop to learn simple ways to help your children understand each other, play, and communicate positively at home.

Parents are invited to attend a short workshop that will share simple ways to help children interact with and understand their siblings with a disability. We will talk about easy strategies to support play, communication, and positive interactions at home.

While parents attend the workshop, children will have time to play inside the We Rock the Spectrum Kids Gym with support from ESCNJ's Behavior Supports Team. The team will help guide and model positive interactions between siblings during play.
