

CRYSTAL LOWERY

CRITICAL THINKER
THINKER

About Me

My family consists of my mom, who is a therapist, my dad, who is a high school teacher, my brother, who is a student, and me, who is also a student. I have 2 pets, who are my dog, Jax, and my cat, Belle. Some of my hobbies include gaming, playing instruments (such as trumpet and piano), listening to music, and learning new subjects. My favorite food is Poke, a Hawaiian bowl of rice and other things. My favorite music artist is Pinkpantheress, and my favorite color is sage green. I have lived most of my life in Texas, and moved away when I was 9 to live with my grandparents until my dad got a job here. I love learning more about political geography and where places are. I love drawing, but I am not as good at drawing as I would like to be, and wish to improve. I believe I have always been a smart person, and I love to help those around me.

I am an Critical Thinker when I engage in learning on independently. I have always been interested in everything learning related, and tested at a third grade level before I even started school. Because of this, I am able to thrive academically, and if I don't understand something immediately, I think critically so any future instances that require a skill, I am able to do it. All of my hobbies have things to do with strategy and learning because that is something I enjoy, which is also why I'm a thinker. Being able to think hard is something that is very important to me so I can succeed. I love creative writing and poetry, and those hobbies are things that allow me to use these skills that I have. I can think critically when the situation demands.

“Hard work beats talent when talent doesn’t work hard” -Tim Notke

26

my lucky number and day I was born

1813

miles from my hometown to my
current town

3

the amount of places I have lived

13

last two digits of
the year I was born