

ETHAN ISIDORE

SELF-DIRECTED LEARNER

About Me

My name is Ethan Isidore and I am a junior in Norwalk High School. I was born in Stamford, CT and I am from Haiti. I was raised by my mother and father. I like to cook for my family, I like to listen to music, listen and learn more about people and more. I currently have a 3.7 GPA and my main goal right now is to succeed in anything I choose to do. I want to attend college, but I am still at a crossroads with what I want to commit and major. Personal activities I do are going to the gym, journal from time to time, and honestly just surrounding myself with people that are positive and that want to grow into a better person day by day.

I am a Self-Directed Learner when I ...

Get an idea in my head and I run with it. Once I get the plan going in my head, I'm ready to go and will start working. I once jumpstarted my mom's car battery when it wasn't starting. We were 4 blocks away from the house when the battery died and I looked up how to jumpstart a battery. The video didn't do much, so I just used my critical thinking skills and got it up and running. The Self Directed Competency is important to me because I believe in life you are the only person that got YOU. So you need to be able to carve your own way, be able to learn and do certain things on your own. This was really like an indication you really can do anything you put your mind to. When we are young, we hear everyone give us advice on what we should do, but it doesn't truly resonate with you until you have that clarity moment and see that they were always right. Overall, I felt that this competency resonated with me the most because most things in my life I have done or learnt on my own. My independent trait is what I believe to be my strongest trait.

"You'll never know the value of a moment before it becomes a memory."
