From Horses to Airplanes: A Fifth Grade Adventure

Our 5th grade class recently enjoyed a wonderful field trip that took us from the elegance of dressage horses to the excitement of aviation.

Our day began at a local dressage barn, where students met a beautiful Lipizzan horse and learned about the breed's fascinating history and their dwindling numbers worldwide. We also met a horse that had just been imported from the Netherlands, which sparked great questions about how horses travel and adjust to new homes. Emily, the trainer, shared her journey of becoming a professional horse trainer, including the hard work and dedication it took during her internship. Students also learned about dressage, horse care, and what it takes to keep these incredible animals healthy and trained.

Next, we visited Creswell Airport, where students stepped into the world of aviation. They learned about airport and airplane safety, explored different types of planes, and even saw aircraft engines and planes being built. One of the highlights was talking with pilots as they flew overhead and helping guide them while they gave us our own mini airshow. Students also had the chance to sit inside a very cool airplane, which quickly became a favorite moment of the day.

In addition to everything we learned, students also had the opportunity to meet two young adults who have turned their passions into careers, one working with horses and the other in aviation. It was inspiring for students to see how dedication and hard work can turn something you love into a profession.

From horses to airplanes, the day was filled with curiosity, hands-on learning, and lots of excitement. It was wonderful to watch students ask thoughtful questions and experience new things beyond the classroom.
