Principal's Pen:

Thank you to everyone who attended our picnic. You all made the day so special for your children. ☺ Our year is quickly ending, and students who are in danger of failing are running out of time. If your child is in this situation, it is vital you contact your child's teacher as soon as possible. If your child is on the verge of meeting his or her academic or behavioral goals, kudos to you, parents!

Reading Corner:

While nothing replaces a good book or a bedtime story and human connection, there are technology-based learning games out there in which students can practice literacy skills. There are learning videos on YouTube that teach letters, sounds, etc. while incorporating movement and exercise. One popular creator is Jack Hartmann. You can also find educational websites that can help your child practice reading. Examples include, but are not limited to, National Geographic, ABCmouse, PBS Kids, etc. If technology is the thing that drives your household, there are numerous ways and sites in which students can practice literacy skills.

Math Matters:

With the number of school days winding down, there are ample opportunities to practice math using the calendar. Have your child count the number of days until the last day (May 22nd). Between now and then, find all the days that are even numbers. Find all the days that are odd numbers. Add two days, like May 5th and May 12th. Subtract two days. Find multiples of one of the days (May 12th – 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 12). Just a simple calendar can be used to practice math.

Important Dates:

- April 20th Class Pictures-Students must be in regular uniforms.
- April 23rd Progress reports
- April 24th Deadline to submit "A Ticket Around the World" pamphlet from our literacy picnic
- May 1st Title I parent survey closes.
