DIRECTOR'S NOTE

"But that's SO BORING!" my four year-old daughter exclaims in a true Veruca-like response to my simple request to go brush her teeth. Every parent or teacher has heard these words time after time from their children and students. At first I was incredibly frustrated when my own children would declare something boring.

"It may be boring, but we still do it because it is important," I would say with every ounce of patience and placidity I could muster

But then I realized I was missing something important.

Boredom is not bad.

Boredom is necessary in order to allow our brains to do their best creative work. To process information and emotions. To daydream. To make new connections. To create. To enter a world of pure imagination.

God has created us in His image, and He is the ultimate Creator. When we use our imaginations to create something in goodness, we experience and fulfill that holy purpose.

The world of Willy Wonka is anything but boring because of rich imagination. Throughout this production process, students have become our creative partners, from making bold physical and vocal choices for their characters to learning to ad-lib, and even creating their own Wonka-inspired inventions. It is a true gift to walk alongside young students as they discover their God given creative gifts and begin developing them to share with others for His glory. The process of creating with students is one of my greatest joys, and we are brimming with excitement to share this show with each of you.

Welcome to the world of our collective pure imagination. We hope you enjoy the show!

Enjoy the show,
