

No Excuses. Own It.

Summer Term starts today — and so does your most important year yet. Year 10 is the year that separates those who drift from those who decide. Every choice you make this term — how you show up, how you sit down, how you switch on — shapes the result you'll hold in your hands next summer.

Prepared to Learn

Pen. Homework. Books. No equipment = no progress. Simple.

Uniform & Presentation

How you present yourself tells the world how seriously you take yourself.

Punctuality

Late means lost. Every minute missed is a minute you cannot get back — and it's disrespectful to the room.

 Personal responsibility means no waiting for someone else to sort it. Your bag. Your tie. Your time. Your call.

My Journey — Where Am I Going?

Nobody is coming to carry you there. The path from where you are to where you want to be is built one decision at a time — and it starts with three honest questions.

1

Where am I going?

Name your destination. A career, a college place, a version of yourself you're proud of. You can't navigate without a destination.

2

How do I get there?

Grades matter. But so do habits — revision routines, asking for help, staying the course when it gets hard. Map the steps, then walk them.

3

What skills do I need?

Resilience. Self-discipline. Communication. Time management. These are the life skills that open doors — and they're built right here, right now.

"If it is not me, then who?" Nobody else will live your life for you. No tutor, no parent, no lucky break. The answer to that question is always — you.
