Cancer is difficult to navigate, emotionally and physically. You never know what you might need and when you might need it.

That's why your health plan is providing Iris at no additional cost. This program complements your oncologist's care and treatment plan. It provides immediate access to reliable information and resources that cancer patients often need between appointments and treatments.

Iris one-on-one support from caring cancer experts includes:

24 x 7 access to a team of oncology nurses
Who can provide personalized advice on managing side effects and symptoms

Weekly mental health sessions
With a therapist specializing in working with people and families dealing with cancer

Access to registered dietitians
Who focus on nutrition and cancer

A digital tracker
For recording goals and side effects and remote monitoring by the Iris nursing team who will check in when needed

Resource navigation
To help identify available local and national support, including co-pay assistance and supplemental social services

A library of more than 200 on-demand articles
And videos on cancer, treatments, side effects and procedures

When you're diagnosed with cancer, no amount of expert information, timely answers or personalized support is too much. Your oncologist leads your care. Iris is there for the moments in between.
