

This explains my story in America because it says it's my home. My home means more in the context of where I feel like I'm myself in this beautiful country. It also highlights the word free which helps explain my story because I was able to grow up freely, unlike in some other countries. The words me and free stick out, showing how in this country I can freely be me, which is super important. IT also has no punctuation because I feel like punctuation is a restriction, but America is free, so there is no end. This poem is able to wrap up my story by stating how I can be truly free and independently myself in America.
