Graduate Research Day 2026

Audio	Video
[Zithlaly] Graduate Research Day is a day where all of the students get to showcase all their hard work and effort that they spend in the lab throughout the whole year,	Poster session in large room with sun pouring the glass at one end. There are rows of posters stretching across the room. A variety of student stand in front of their posters and explain their research to faculty and peers and they can either present it in oral presentations,	Student stands a podium on the side of a stage with his slide projected on a huge screen at his side or in poster sessions, and they have the chance to also, be judged and get awards for them that day.	More students presenting their posters to interested listeners
It's a really special opportunity, I would think, because most times a department is so focused on a discipline, be it vasculature or microbiology, that we don't get to interact with our other peers and what they do in their research. But this day,	Montage of three different students, both male and female, giving an oral presentation to an auditorium full of their peers and faculty advisors
we all get to see the different research that happens among our other peer or graduate students as well.	Students present their research while standing at their posters
I think it's important because it opens so many opportunities for collaborative areas of research. Maybe you don't know about this technique that this other mentor or researcher is doing in a different department,	Keynote speakers stands on stage and discusses his journey from student to faculty professor as an auditorium full of students and faculty listen intently.
and that also can apply to your own research as well. You you can see it in different ways that it can be translated that being clinical or health related areas. It's a really fun,	Students present a range of research on both clinical and basic science topics to mentors and fellow students during the poster session experience. I had a privilege of organizing it with the student council, which was also a great experience on its own. And I recommend more students to please participate in being in the student council and having this opportunity.	Young woman with long, straight dark hair, wearing a white blouse and beige jacket sits in front of a purple backdrop with gold and white L S U Health Shreveport logos repeated. Text: Zithlaly Amezquita President, Graduate Student Council