[Dr. Kaufman] My name is Doctor David Kaufman. I am the program director of the Allergy and Immunology Fellowship here at LSU Health Shreveport. We welcome you to our virtual tour today. We have a great program here. It was founded by Doctor Sami Bahna almost 18 years ago, and he continues to be	Man with short dark hair in a dark suit with a gold tie standing in a hallway lined with computer stations for charting. an important part of this program. He is a world renowned allergist	Older doctor talking to a mother. They are standing beside a small child who is laying on his stomach and his back is marked with an allergy test with specialty in food allergy, and I myself am a graduate of this program about 15 years ago. One of the hallmarks of our program is that it's a tight knit family atmosphere. We take two fellows in each academic year, and we spend a lot of time together. So we'll be- your faculty will work	Doctor Kaufman on camera very closely with you, myself, Doctor Bahna, and the four fellows and some of the guest faculty that we have from time to time. We're very proud	Doctor Kaufman and an Allergy fellow walking down a clinic hallway of our 100% board pass rate over the past 18 years. As far as our clinical service, we have a inpatient consultation service for both allergy and immunology, all ages, pediatric and adult. We also have two outpatient clinics, which are both also mixed clinics. There's no specified pediatric or adult clinic. And we like to encourage a lot of cross-training.	Doctor Kaufman on camera
One clinic is at our ambulatory care center here on campus. And that's a great clinic because it's a continuity clinic.	Exterior high drone shot of the ambulatory care center a really unique idea. It's the allergy, asthma and ENT clinic, which is about 5 or 10 minutes away. And that's fantastic because	Exterior of stand alone clinic cuts to a pan of the waiting area we see a lot of patients from the community, and they may see one or more specialists.	Doctor Kaufman on camera

For example, somebody with sinusitis might see us for the allergies and might see the otolaryngology department for more surgical and procedural management. And so it really is	Montage of exam rooms and different procedure rooms in the clinic great for the doctors to to be collegial and work together on patients. And the patients really, enjoy it and like having everything in one place. We have a robust conference schedule, most days of the week. The conferences include journal club, textbook review for both an allergy and an immunology textbook and fellow and faculty seminars where topics are prepared in a more PowerPoint fashion and presented to the group. We also have special grand rounds and other guest speakers throughout the year. In addition, we have some cross-training with the different rotations that are affiliated with allergy and immunology. For example, fellows spend time with pulmonology, otolaryngology, infectious disease, and in the clinical laboratory to learn these important topics which are both relevant to our practice as well as also presented on the boards. Shreveport and Bossier City are fantastic places to get your training. It is really easy to live here,	Doctor Kaufman on camera being that it's a small metro area. People can drive and get anywhere within 20 minutes. There's little to no traffic, but yet it's still large enough where there's plenty of dining options, plenty of activities, great weather, outdoor activities. So it's actually a a low stress	Montage of Shreveport scenes – fountain with skyline, low traffic on a downtown street, outdoor festival with crowds walking around, boat motoring down the river that runs through downtown.
place to spend your two years here, studying and learning, with us about allergy and immunology. And so we highly encourage all applicants from both pediatric and internal medicine specialties. It's a common application, as it's a conjoint program.	Doctor Kaufman on camera
We hope to meet many of you soon.	Purple motion background with gold and white L S U Health Shreveport logo in the center. White text below: Division of Allergy and Immunology
