welcoming in the new

Dear Overbrook Community,

It has been a blessing to be back at Overbrook School after ten years serving in other schools. When I returned to campus this year, I was first struck by the beauty of the physical enhancements: the new entrance and rotunda, the new front foyer and gym lobby, and the grassy lawn in front of the school. All of these spaces are so bright and welcoming, and they have been the perfect venues for multiple events over the course of this year.

Although parts of the school building may look different, the heart of Overbrook is the same as ever. It is great to see so many of the talented, dedicated faculty and staff I worked with a decade ago still giving their time and talent for the benefit of our students. I continue to be impressed by the way in which the Overbrook faculty and staff go the extra mile to set students up for success.

Our students give me delight every day. They are as friendly and happy as ever, keeping up the Overbrook tradition of being hard workers who excel and who are always open to trying new things. Whether it is Forensics, math competitions, athletics, art, or music, Overbrook students give their all and come out on top!

One feature of our students in particular that I so appreciate is the way they support and encourage one another. After Mass each Friday, we announce before the whole school the recent accomplishments of our boys and girls. The students consistently celebrate each success enthusiastically. St. Paul seems to have been talking about the students at Overbrook when he said, "Therefore, encourage one another and build each other up, just as in fact you are doing" (1 Thessalonians 5:11).

I am grateful to be in this community where God is doing great things, particularly as we put the initiatives of our strategic plan into action and prepare for the next chapter of Overbrook School's 85-year history. As we look towards the beautiful May traditions of May Crowning, field day, and graduations, please join me in asking God's blessings upon our students, their families, and all those in the Overbrook School community.

Sincerely in Christ,

Finding a HOME at Overbrook

In 2021, Overbrook School saw the largest increase in new family enrollment in nearly a decade, with a 14% growth rate that added 44 new students to the school community. This year, the school has 325 students. Continued growth in the city of Nashville and greater Middle Tennessee, as well as more families seeking out Overbrook's particular blend of academic rigor, religious formation, and family environment has contributed to this uptick in enrollment.

"With the influx of new families moving to Nashville, we are excited to expand and diversify our school population and welcome people into our loving school community," said Kate Evertsen, Overbrook's Director of Admissions. "The admissions process includes screenings and in-person visits to ensure we are including families who advance the school's mission in their everyday lives."

The Nohrdens from Massachusetts and the Goggins from Chicago are two families who specifically sought out Overbrook School's Catholic identity.

Dr. Jennifer Nohrden and her husband Michael used the "Praying As A Family" program developed by The Dominican Sisters of St. Cecilia after discovering it on EWTN in 2017. The Nohrden's two daughters, Caroline, a fourth grader, and Sophia, a sixth grader, were attending a secular prep school in the Boston area when the COVID-19 pandemic hit. Lockdown and new virtual work options freed their family to move wherever they wanted. After briefly considering a move to North Carolina, they decided instead to seek out opportunities in Nashville, specifically to be able to attend a school run by the Dominican Sisters. Dr. Nohrden was offered a position on the faculty at Vanderbilt University that sealed the deal.

"We were constantly fighting the culture around us, knowing it was becoming more and more critical to be in a place where the foundation and education was as strong as possible," she said. "We moved here specifically to Overbrook and specifically to be around a very special group of religious women who have been educating for generations."

Michael Nohrden, who considered the priesthood but landed in IT instead, said the family's initial impressions of Overbrook still ring true: "The girls are definitely being pushed and stretched academically, and we're really happy to have found a great combination of a traditional Catholic education and such a cutting-edge approach to nurturing children academically."

Danielle Goggin and her husband, Shea, moved to Nashville from Chicago. Many factors went into choosing Overbrook, but one of the main reasons was the comfort level they felt from their first visit on campus.

"The school was so engaged in our family; they wanted to understand our children individually and not just as the two Goggin boys. What kind of learners are they? Are they more athletic or more into music? Do they have an affinity for spelling or debate?" That level of interest spoke to Danielle Goggin, who is an artist, and gave her an instant feeling of connection to Overbrook.

Also experiencing the newfound freedom of the post-COVID world where people could work from anywhere, Danielle and Shea, who works in finance, acted on their desire to move and were drawn to Nashville because of its schools. They specifically sought out Catholic schools, which led them to Overbrook.

Third grader Hayes Goggin enjoying a little free time

As they say, "we thought it was important because we hadn't had that religious education and we wanted our children to have that background."

Both of their boys – Whalen in fifth grade and Hayes in third grade – immediately felt welcomed as they connected with their Overbrook "buddy" family upon enrollment. When school began, they joined the cross country team, played basketball and took up ukulele.

"We just felt like there was such a strong connection and our children would be safe and comfortable at Overbrook," said Goggin.
Admissions Director Kate Evertsen says that while the enrollment growth is important for Overbrook's long-term success, what is more important is making sure families embrace and are embraced by the community and its mission. "We are very purposeful with admissions."

As Overbrook prepares to add a second pre-K for 2022-2023, the school is not only benefiting from Nashville's growth, but even more so from the families who are joining the community. Both those new to Middle Tennessee and those who have been here for generations find a school that roots students in Truth and embraces the whole family.

LOOKING AHEAD

Starting in 2022-2023, Overbrook School will become Nashville's only preschool through sixth grade co-ed Catholic school. The first major initiative to come out of the 2021-2026 strategic plan, this decision was announced last August, and since that time there has been a flurry of activity as Overbrook faculty and staff plan for next year. The move to a PreK-6 model allows Overbrook to focus uniquely on the educational and formational needs of younger boys and girls, while fifth and sixth graders will receive an age-appropriate academic, spiritual, and human formation aimed at leadership development rooted in a Dominican emphasis on the virtues.

Strategic plan implementation teams have been examining the current academic program with an eye to sharpening Overbrook's focus on what it does best – offering an outstanding academic preparation where students are educated in truth and charity in the context of a nurturing community marked by grace, friendship, freedom, and confidence. This is the Dominican Difference, which provides a foundation for life.

A few new curricular features are taking shape:
Due to strong interest among prospective families, Overbrook will add a second preschool three-year-old class for the 2022-2023 school year.

The Catechesis of the Good Shepherd, a Montessori-inspired approach to teaching the faith that currently runs preschool-fifth grade, will expand to include sixth grade, with a focus especially on the Old Testament and salvation history.

Overbrook will also incorporate a new Theology of the Body program from Ruah Woods for all the grades, emphasizing St. John Paul II's beautiful explication of the dignity of the human person and an understanding that our lives are meant to be a gift to others.

The fifth and sixth grades will highlight leadership development, beginning with a student leadership retreat, as well as increased weekly leadership opportunities within the school and at school events.

Called to Greatness will be a new virtue formation course focused on practical life skills, technology skills, digital citizenship, servant leadership, and refinement in public speaking.

The sixth graders will conclude their year with a capstone project with formal presentation and a special class trip.

BUILDING FOR GROWTH

For next year, Overbrook will add a new PreK room, as well as relocate spaces for individual tutoring and the SOAR enrichment program. The school will also shift some offices to provide for more central access to Beyond the Brook Farm. The farm's planned makeover is fully funded, and a new complex of animal barns, outdoor learning space, and garden beds will be added this summer. Additionally, construction of a new shared Overbrook and St. Cecilia field house with restrooms, concessions, and storage will also commence over the summer.

VOICES FROM THE COMMUNITY

The Brook caught up with Sister Immaculata and several teachers and parents to get their unique perspective on the upcoming changes:

Q: What opportunities does this new chapter present in the life of Overbrook School?

A: The transition provides the opportunity for Overbrook to address more specifically students' social-emotional needs, to stimulate their desire for life-long learning and give them the skills to support it, as well as build their confidence as servant leaders. The focus on a PreK-6 student body allows Overbrook to focus all of its faculty and staff expertise, resources, and professional development on educating the young student.

We also recognize that as children grow emotionally, academically and spiritually, the 6th grade student is at a unique developmental time. When given the formation, encouragement, and opportunity to be the leaders, these young people can blossom in a wonderful way. This move will offer definite advantages in developing responsible and mature leaders who can carry throughout their lives the formation they received at Overbrook.

Q: How will this transition address the education of the whole child?

A: We are looking at what will best support children in their social-emotional development, in an age appropriate manner, with tools to navigate society and experiences. For example, Overbrook will incorporate St. John Paul II's masterwork, A Theology of the Body (TOB) into its K - fifth grade curriculum at the start of the 2022-2023 school year.

The movement from preschool to Kindergarten to elementary grades respects the gradual development of the child, transitioning from a Montessori approach to whole group instruction that fosters discussion, collaboration, and growth in independence.

Q: The concept of leadership has been a common theme that many Overbrook teachers and parents have touched on. Can you provide more specifics?

A: Yes, by intentionally creating time for sixth graders to lead the younger children and school "buddies" to interact, a sense of community grows within the whole school, making for a happy, caring culture among all members. The interaction among student, and teachers and the development of friendships and mentoring opportunities between the older and younger students gives everyone a sense of belonging and security, as well as a joy of being loved and respected by those of varying ages.

Diane Meier, teacher
A 25-year teaching veteran who has been at Overbrook for the last six years, Diane is currently teaching fifth grade math, science, and religion. She is also the Forensics coach and has served on the sixth grade strategic plan implementation and academic teams.

Q: What opportunities do you think this decision presents to Overbrook students and families?

A: A clear path can now be created for both boys and girls. For the boys, I feel that this is the opportunity for students not to worry about what they are going to do about seventh-eighth grades. For the girls, this is a wonderful opportunity to experience St. Cecilia Academy for two extra years. As a graduate of SCA myself, I would have loved two extra years at this amazing school. My time at SCA was four of the best years of my life. I can't wait for my daughter to have this opportunity, and now she is going to get an extra year.

"We have three boys enrolled at Overbrook; Prek, first Grade and third Grade. With the school ending in sixth grade, the parents who choose OS for their children in Prek, or kindergarten are choosing the school knowing that they will face a decision for seventh and eighth grade. It will allow all the sixth graders to graduate together, both boys and girls, and to leave OS on a high note, well prepared academically and spiritually for whatever junior high school option they choose next."

Q: Development of goals for students is an integral part of the Overbrook experience. How will the move to a PreK-6 model enhance this vital process?

A: One thing that I love about being a teacher at Overbrook is the attention teachers take to bridge students from one grade to the next. This allows for easier transitions from year to year for the boys and girls, and it also makes it easier for new students and teachers to transfer into Overbrook. When teachers are discussing student goals across all grade levels, we have important continuity. The path through Overbrook is intentional and focused on educating the whole child.

Jacquie Grytza, teacher
In her 16th year teaching all grades from 4-12, Jacquie is completing her eighth year at Overbrook and currently teaches fourth grade.

Q: What were your initial reactions to the announcement about Overbrook School, and how have you been involved in the planning this year?

A: I was excited for the seventh and eighth graders. I think they are ready to be with older students and to have additional opportunities in academics, sports, and clubs. In this past year, I have been involved with social justice and service initiatives, and also providing my input with St. Cecilia teachers as well as on the sixth grade implementation team. Additionally, I am on a new Advancement Education committee. I am excited that every grade will have a patron saint and will tie in service with that saint. For example, St. Martin De Porres will connect with service to Room in The Inn.

Kesha Wall, teacher
A teacher for 24 years, 16 of which have been at Overbrook, Kesha currently teaches 5th grade language arts and social studies.

Q: Overbrook is known for its integrated approach. How does this transition enhance the education of the whole child?

A: When I teach Civil War history, we read a book set at the Battle of Bull Run. One student last year said he can never tell if he's in reading or social studies class because I think when students can see things coming together, it doesn't seem like 'one class period ends and another begins.' It is all learning. Seeing math and science also having real-life applications on the farm, such as when students tap the maple trees on campus, is exactly the real-life approach to learning parents want in an education.

Q: Can you share a few of the topics the teachers have discussed about the fifth and sixth grade program?

A: I am on the 6th grade implementation team, and for student life, we have been talking about leadership opportunities, buddy systems, important traditions at OS, and school service. In social studies, we are looking at texts to support a new sixth grade curriculum. Having each grade be responsible for service initiatives that take care of our school is the most important to me, with the sixth grade overseeing a great deal. Giving speaking opportunities to fifth and sixth graders in front of the school is another.

More details about the Overbrook program can be found at: overbrook.edu/pre-k-through-6.

> We have two girls, one in sixth and the other in eighth Grade, and I have been a part of the Overbrook family for around 20 years. I think this transition will enrich the learning environment. A renewed focus on STEM and the Beyond the Brook Farm will provide students the opportunity to grow with a sense of wonder. Additionally, wonderful leadership opportunities will be created for the sixth graders through partnerships with the lower grades.

SOAR

OPENS NEW DOORS AT OVERBROOK

Parents, Carly Bhave and Nikki Crosslin, were both pleasantly surprised when their children were identified for Overbrook's new SOAR program for gifted students.

"I didn't know much about the program and I had absolutely no thought that my kids would be in any kind of gifted program," Mrs. Bhave said. But the announcement during the 2020-2021 school year that Overbrook would be starting a gifted program called SOAR had a significant impact on her children and all those who now participate. Students are identified as gifted through screening of their educational performance, cognitive ability test scoring, and nationally- normed parent and teacher checklists of characteristics of giftedness and creativity.

The SOAR program was developed at Overbrook by Marion Cianciolo, a 24-year teaching veteran who holds an Education Specialist degree in Academically Gifted programs and started a gifted resource program in Mannheim and Worms, Germany for the Department of Defense Dependents' Schools. Mrs. Cianciolo taught at Overbrook as a third and fourth-grade teacher for nine years prior to a move out of state. While she was away, she was asked to design a gifted program for Sacred Heart Academy in Warner Robins, Georgia. Upon her return to Overbrook, she developed SOAR as an enrichment addition to the school's academic program.

"My mission is to serve students with high abilities in reading and math and give them opportunities to go beyond what is normally taught in the classroom" she said. "There is a distinct difference between bright children and gifted children. The gifted learner has a different way of thinking. Bright children are in the top group, interested in what they are learning, and know the answers to the questions the teacher asks. Gifted learners are beyond the group, highly curious, and question the answers."

> Within the first two weeks of being in the SOAR class I saw a change in Sachin.
> Carly Bhave, *parent

The goal of Overbrook's SOAR program is to provide a different way of learning and academic development for gifted students that is customized for Overbrook, which already has a rigorous curriculum and many bright children. For example, units of study move at a pace that exceeds the normal speed of Overbrook's classroom lessons in math and reading and appeal to higher-level thinking and creativity of students.

"Within the first two weeks of being in the SOAR class, I saw a change in Sachin," Mrs. Bhave said of her sixth-grade son in whom she saw a newfound joy when he started the classes. "It was a complete turn-around in a short amount of time." Sachin and his brother, Praveen, a fourth grader, both now participate in SOAR.

"I didn't understand what a gifted program was, but now I understand how important it is to provide challenges and stimulation for every student. My boys needed that enrichment and challenge … And the fact that Overbrook screens all the students was really significant."

For sixth grader, Sophie, and third grader, John Crosslin, SOAR class is the highlight of their week, according to their mother.

"For Sophie, it has electrified her love of learning. She truly enjoys tackling the more challenging curriculum presented in SOAR, which extends to and benefits all of her other subjects," Nikki Crosslin said. "And the program has boosted John's academic confidence and piqued his curiosity to learn beyond what is presented to him in the classroom. It has improved the way he approaches all of his studies, always wanting to go the extra mile to solve a problem or figure out a solution."

> By identifying and providing students who need more challenging academic offerings, the school is meeting the needs of a unique niche in the school.
> Nikki Crosslin, *parent

Mrs. Cianciolo, worked with Sister Immaculata, O.P., to ensure Overbrook's SOAR program used the same criteria as the state of Tennessee for gifted identification based on education performance, cognitive ability, and creativity. They formed a School Enrichment Team on which they serve along with Brian Meehan, Overbrook's reading specialist, and Whitney Stovall, the school counselor. Once students were identified by the team, they were tested further using a Cognitive Abilities Test. Mrs. Cianciolo also expanded the program this year to identify and serve first-grade students in the second semester of this school year.

Overbrook's pioneering leadership in the Nashville Catholic Middle School Forensics League was on full display at the first-ever Hall of Fame induction this past fall at the Catholic Pastoral Center.

Six of the twelve inaugural honorees in the Hall of Fame are graduates of Overbrook, including League Alumni Honorees Abbie Loftus DeBlasis (OS '93,) Rob Hancock (OS '92), and Heather Yopp Honeycutt (OS '98), Coach Honoree Dr. Carolyn Baker, and Friends of Forensics Honorees, Pam Beaver and Angela Siefker.

Dr. Carolyn Baker, who founded Overbrook's Forensics Team and the Diocesan League, and has been a pivotal force behind Forensics in the Nashville Catholic schools, said she has remained in touch over the years with the league leaders and often thought there should be a place of recognition for all of the students and coaches who have participated in the speech and drama team competition throughout the years.

"All of these adults come back and say, 'You have no idea how this program impacted my life and my career," Baker said, adding that the former Forensics participants, coaches and volunteers deserve a place of recognition as much as athletes in the various athletic Halls of Fame in the diocese.

> Students definitely saw the Hall of Fame and had this thought of 'Look at what I could do someday'.
> Diane Meier, Overbrook's current Forensics coach

"For me, Forensics was an extremely pivotal activity in my life," said Heather Yopp Honeycutt, who was both on the Overbrook and St. Cecilia Academy Forensic Teams. "I developed skills and confidence speaking in public, learned how to craft thoughts and present an idea. When I look back on my time at Overbrook and St. Cecilia, so many of my memories come from Forensics."

She said her induction into the Hall of Fame was extremely humbling.

"It means a lot to me. So many students participated, and to be recognized for something that you had so much fun doing was just really humbling."

"It was such an honor," Forensics volunteer Angela Siefker said of being inducted into the Hall of Fame. "I had so much fun participating in Forensics and, in fact, I haven't stopped." Siefker still volunteers at tournaments and is currently helping the team at St. Cecilia Academy. "It keeps me connected with the kids, and that's what I wanted."

"With Forensics, I watched the students grow from year to year and I also saw what it did for Mary," Siefker said of her daughter who is now a principal at a primary school in Japan. "She probably wouldn't be where she is today without Forensics."

Diane Meier, Overbrook's current Forensics coach, said the Hall of Fame is inspiring to her current fifth- through eighth-grade students.

"They definitely saw the Hall of Fame and had this thought of 'Look at what I could do someday.' And they also got to see people who care so much about something that they are doing," Meier said.

Overbrook's current team includes 34 students in Grades 5 through 8. They placed first at the St. Rose Tournament this year and second place in Sweepstakes at the JPII and Father Ryan Tournaments.

"They've done so well this year, in fact they have taken second place in all of the tournaments this year," she said. "It is such a great activity both for kids who love to get up and speak or perform but also for those kids who are shy and quiet."

lege of William and Mary, and the University of Virginia. Students in the second through fifth-grade program attend pull-out SOAR math classes once a week, and all SOAR students participate in advanced reading groups once a week. Third- through fifth-grade SOAR students also participate on grade level competition math teams which are also open to all Overbrook math students who meet scoring criteria, teacher recommendation, and a love of advanced problem solving. Most SOAR students in the sixth grade also participate in Overbrook's Jr. High Math Counts program.

Heather Schoch said her daughter, Ellie, a fifth-grader, is "happiest on SOAR days because she thinks about the world a little bit differently. I think, for Ellie, it's about being seen."

"It piques her interest level; she loves things that are creative. [SOAR] gives her a chance to come out of the classroom environment," she said, adding that her younger daughter, Sophie, a third grader, benefits from the speed at which SOAR classes move and the increased challenge and engagement.

"It's been amazing getting to work with these students," Mrs. Cianciolo said, but she doesn't want to limit the program simply to those identified as gifted alone. She also is working to design packets for use in the general classrooms for children who finish their work early or crave more depth. She said these materials will expose more students to higher reasoning skills and the concepts used in SOAR.

"It's really my passion and every day is a great day because it is what I was meant to do," Mrs. Cianciolo said. "And when you get to do what you're meant to do, it is just a blessing."

Mrs. Crosslin summed it up well when she said, "Adding the SOAR program at Overbrook is a win-win for the school and its students."

ALUMNI NEWS

FOUR ALUMNI NAMED NATIONAL MERIT FINALISTS

Gilmer

Huber

Rodgers

Murphy

Congratulations to four members of the Overbrook Class of 2018 – Emi Gilmer, Anna Huber, Austin Murphy, and Ellie Rodgers – who are in the top 1% of high school seniors in the country. High school juniors take the PSAT (Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test)/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test to measure critical reading ability, mathematical problem-solving skills, and writing ability. The highest-scoring program entrants in each state are selected as National Merit Semifinalists and then advance for consideration as finalists with the possibility of merit-based college scholarships. All four of these talented alumni were named finalists this spring due to their robust academic skills and achievements, extracurricular accomplishments and potential for success in rigorous college studies.

OVERBROOK CLASS OF 1996 GATHERING

Overbrook Class of '96 members gathered for a special brunch reunion with their formar fourth grade teacher. In attendance was former teacher, Elizabeth "Ms. Imorde" Puryear, and her husband Mark Puryear, Katie Wells Price and husband, Pat Price, Emme Simpkins, and Chase Breland. Chase Breland is the project manager of Strategy Execution at Sarah Cannon and is married to wife, Kathleen. They have one daughter, Sally Cate, who is 18 months. Emme Simpkins works in Aesthetics for Dr. Joseph DeLozier. She is married and has a son, Evan, who is nine years old. Katie Wells Price is a children's book author, motivational speaker, Christian life coach, and substitute teacher. Elizabeth Imorde Puryear and her husband reside in Franklin, where she still teaches as a math specialist for the Williamson County Schools, and her husband, Mark Puryear, is an attorney. They have three children. Some members at the brunch had not seen each other in over 30 years, so it was a very special day.

ONCE AN EAGLE, ALWAYS AN EAGLE

Three Overbrook alumni from the class of 2016 - Mary Catherine Claverie, Kate Kemp, and Anna Regnier - are roommates at Boston College. Now in their junior year, Mary Catherine and Kate have been friends since PreK at Overbrook. When Anna moved to Nashville and started at Overbrook in sixth grade, the girls all became fast friends.

From Overbrook, the trio went on to different high schools – Anna and Kate to St. Cecilia Academy and Mary Catherine to Harpeth Hall – but found themselves back together in the fall of 2020 in Boston. "It was so nice reconnecting with Kate and Anna last year, and I am so incredibly happy that I have had the opportunity to live with them. It's super fun having so many shared memories and experiences from middle school and making new ones in college now, too," noted Mary Catherine.

At Boston College , Kate is majoring in history and English and minoring in ancient civilizations. She is the social media coordinator for the BC radio station and a member of the Real Food and History Club.

Anna's major is environmental geoscience with a minor in education. She is vice president of the Geology Association and plays intramural volleyball. This semester, she is tutoring with the Boston Partners. Mary Catherine is majoring in history and double minoring in journalism and management/leadership. She is a member of the University Chorale of Boston College and is involved with the student newspaper, The Heights, and the History Club.

Overbrook Math Team

In Gratitude: 2020-21 Annual Report

The following pages highlight the many parents, grandparents, alumni, parents and grandparents of alumni, and friends who give generously of time and treasure to ensure the vibrancy of Overbrook and the fulfillment of the school's mission, which is to root children in Truth, inspire them to wonder and challenge them to give their best to the world.

From 100% of last school year's parent community giving to the Annual Fund campaign, increased giving by alumni and grandparents, the Parents Association creating a virtual Gala to Go dinner and auction, and funding secured for a farm makeover, it was a remarkable year! Here are just a few highlights from 2020-21:

- Overbrook introduced several new programs, including a SOAR enrichment program.
- The eighth-graders who make up the class of 2021 led a school-wide service project to help fund a bus for a parish in Malaysia.
- In addition to the successful Gala to Go virtual fundraiser, the Parents Association hosted mother/son and father/daughter activities to foster community.
- Spiritual retreats were offered for students, moms, and dads.
- Implementation teams were formed to shepherd the recently-adopted strategic plan, which was developed with the involvement of many Overbrook stakeholders.

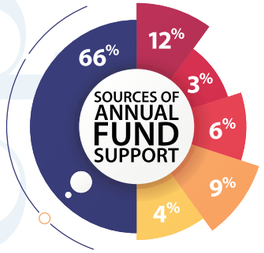

Your love for this school and desire to see it thrive is a beautiful testament. Thank you for helping Overbrook provide an environment of academic excellence where students are invited into a lifelong friendship with Jesus Christ, where they grow in holiness as stewards of God's creation, and a place where they share the Good News of Christ's love with others. Our world needs Overbrook's young men and women more than ever.

We thank God for you – our benefactors – and keep you in our prayers.

MAKE A DIFFERENCE
WAYS TO SUPPORT OVERBROOK

Whether you are an Overbrook parent, grandparent, alumnus, parent of an alumnus, or friend, you make a difference at Overbrook through your financial support. Gifts of all sizes are important and help Overbrook carry out its mission of rooting children in Truth, inspiring them to wonder, and challenging them to give their best to the world. There are several ways to give, including:

ANNUAL FUND – The Annual Fund is the foundation of the school's development program. Along with tuition and endowment earnings, the Annual Fund is a significant source of revenue for the current school year's operating budget. It is an essential source of unrestricted funds and helps cover the difference between tuition and the actual cost to educate each student.

ENDOWED GIFTS & SCHOLARSHIPS – A gift to the endowment keeps on giving for generations to come. An endowed fund exists in perpetuity and the school benefits by a percentage of earnings each year. Overbrook's current endowed funds support general operations, tuition assistance, the library, and the forensics program.

CAPITAL GIFTS – Gifts for capital expenses, building enhancements, or renovation projects are encouraged to help Overbrook improve its facilities. Gifts may be designated for a specific project.

PLANNED GIVING – A planned gift often enables a donor to make an extraordinary gift while receiving significant tax benefits. Planned gifts typically build the endowment, therefore ensuring the long-term financial health and viability of Overbrook School. The most common vehicles for making a planned gift are through one's will, trust, or life insurance policy.

Please visit overbrook.edu/donate to make an online gift and learn more, or contact our development office at 615-292-5134 or email hubers@dominicancampus.org.
