About the South Sound Reading Foundation

As a part of the National Children's Reading Foundation, the South Sound Reading Foundation (SSRF) began in 2001 to improve early childhood reading and high school graduation rates. Since then, the SSRF has established relationships with hundreds of service partners and organizations to bring books and literacy information to families in need throughout Thurston, Mason, and beyond. Our book van travels all over spreading the wonder and promise of reading with engaging story times, parent talks, and free books.
