

Broward County Public Schools Launches New Policy Management System

Improving Transparency, Accessibility, Legal Compliance, and Public Engagement

What This Means for Our Stakeholders

Broward County Public Schools (BCPS) is pleased to announce the transition to the Neola Policy Management System, a modern platform that will help the District manage, update, and publish School Board policies more efficiently while providing easier access for students, families, employees, and community members.

As laws, regulations, and educational best practices continue to evolve, BCPS is committed to ensuring District policies remain current, legally compliant, transparent, and aligned with the needs of the communities we serve.

Why BCPS is Making This Change

- Strengthen legal compliance with evolving state and federal laws and regulations.
- Improve transparency and public access to Board policies.
- Increase accessibility through a modern digital platform.
- Streamline policy development, review, and updates.
- Support community engagement throughout the policy review process.

What to Expect

The transition to Neola will include a comprehensive review of District policies to ensure they remain current, legally compliant, and aligned with District priorities and educational best practices.

While some policies may be updated, revised, consolidated, or newly recommended to address changes in law or operational needs, all proposed changes will be reviewed through the School Board's rulemaking public policy process. The rulemaking policy review process is expected to occur over multiple workshops and meetings and may take approximately one year to complete.

Policy Review Process Begins June 8, 2026

The first rule development Neola Policy Review Board Workshop is scheduled for June 8, 2026.

Our Commitment

At BCPS, transparency and public trust matter. The transition to Neola is another step toward ensuring our policies remain accessible, current, legally compliant, and responsive to the needs of our students, families, employees, and community.
