

The Interview

We often get questions about the interview—what will it be like, what should you expect? For many students, it's a common source of concern. But here's the truth: Admissions interviews are not designed to trip you up or catch you off guard. No one in admissions is a CIA interrogator in disguise! Instead, we're here because we genuinely enjoy talking to young adults and getting to know you. That's really what the interview is—a relaxed conversation where we learn more about you as a person.

You can expect questions about your school experience, what you're enjoying or finding challenging, and how you spend your time both in and outside of school. The good news? These are all topics you know better than anyone else! It's simply a chance for you to share your story.

The interview is also an opportunity for you to ask us questions. Take full advantage of this—it's your chance to learn more about our school in a one-on-one setting. Not sure what to ask? Here are a few ideas:

- 1. Think about your interests and ask how Solebury can support you in these areas.
- 2. Explore our website, check out what we offer, and ask us for more details or clarification on things that interest you.
- 3. Consider things you've seen or heard about at other schools and ask if we have similar programs or approaches.

These conversations are one of the highlights of our day, and we often hear from students that the interview was a surprisingly fun part of the process for them too!
