

Psychology Induction Tasks

Psychology is the scientific study of behaviour. The aim of Psychology is to attempt to explain how and why we think, feel and behave as we do. Psychologists do this by formulating theories and explanations to explain the given behaviour. Psychology is regarded as a science because once Psychologists have formulated their theories and explanations they then design and conduct scientific research studies to test whether these theories and explanations are valid. Studying A Level Psychology will involve learning about the theories, explanations and research studies of many established Psychologists.

The following course will allow you to get a feel for the type of content and tasks you will complete over your first year in Psychology.
