Submit your 200-word argument in the box below.

Casa Grande and the region are now entering a stage of positive economic shifts like we've never seen. Announcements of advanced technology companies with hiring needs in the thousands are mindboggling. Hiring is already taking place but will accelerate in the next 3-5 years. The youngest in this talent pipeline are only in high school or just starting junior high.

For our local students to take full advantage of these current and emerging jobs, have them remain in the area, and be full contributing members of the community, they need the kind of public education that supports and nurtures their potential. This is a community responsibility.

Like those who supported our education, it's our turn to continue giving back whether our children are grown or whether we came from somewhere else. The students going through the system now and those that follow will not only fill the potential new jobs, they will also fill the roles we deem important to a healthy community. Think about police, fire, nurses, teachers, medical professionals, technicians in all fields and customer service workers who make our community whole and wholesome for us as residents.
