

John Doyle

More about John

Contact:

john@aei.agency

John Doyle graduated from Morehouse College in 1997 and took acting classes at Clark-Atlanta University under Carol Mitchell Leon and Whitman Mayo. He has worked as an improv performer & creates solo storytelling shows for school performances. John has worked as a teaching artist with Alliance Theatre, Kaiser Permanente Educational Theatre, Georgia Ensemble Theatre, and TLC, a juvenile diversion program that is part of Fulton County courts.

The Boy Who Would Be King: The MLK Jr. Story

Filled with mischief and dreams, the boy King recounts the extraordinary community of individuals who will shape his ideas and ideals. The play celebrates how King's youth, before destiny, complete with its triumphs and tragedies, led this unassuming Atlanta boy to become one of the most admired Americans of his generation.

2nd Grade

Tuskegee Airmen: Heroes Who Would Not Be Washed Out

The Tuskegee Airmen were the trailblazing first Black pilots in the American military, breaking racial barriers during WWII at home and abroad. This story centers on one such airman, and the journey to his triumphant role in the 322nd Expeditionary Operations Group and the 477th Bombardment Group.

5th Grade

Marshalling Justice

Follow the life of our first African American Supreme Court Justice, Thurgood Marshall. The elderly Marshall reflects on his early years, his work as a Civil Rights lawyer, and the momentous changes in the United States during his lifetime. The presentation includes primary source images as a backdrop.

5th Grade, 8th Grade, U.S. History

