Above all, do not lose your desire to walk. Everyday I walk myself into a state of well-being and walk away from every illness. I have walked myself into my best thoughts and I know of no thought so burdensome that one cannot walk away from it. . . But, by sitting still, and the more one sits still, the closer one comes to feeling ill. . . If one just keeps on walking, everything will be alright.

The otter is the animal which gives the energy of cheer and laughter, but you my friend, ahh yes my dear old friend of twelve years, you give the energy of history and good times as well as cheer and laughter. The fly is a persistent animal. Have you ever sat by a window and watched a fly? When the window is open the fly is free to come and go as it pleases. When the window is closed, the fly sees nothing and can't go anywhere, yet it continues to try until the barrier is gone. What does a fly have to do with your life? Plenty, if you're not persistent you may never get what you want, so keep an eye on those meaningless creatures and they just might lead you through life.

After a while you learn the subtle difference between holding a hand and touching a soul.
You begin to learn that kisses aren't contracts and presents aren't promises. You accept your defeats with your head up and your eyes open, and with the grace of an adult, not the grief of a child. You learn to build all of your roads on today because tomorrow's ground is too uncertain for plans. So plant your own garden and decorate your soul instead of waiting for someone to bring you flowers. Learn that you really are strong, that you really can endure, and that you really do have worth.

At the core of the human experience is friendship. It is the essence of what it is to be alive — of happiness and sadness, of excitement and relaxation, of music, and of silence. Friends show us who we are and who we can be, where we've been, and where we're going.

But ask what is at the core of friendship, and the answers come less easily. What bonds us to our friends are not the individual experiences that made us who we are and brought us together, although these are a part of friendship. What bonds us, and lies at the core, is the unspoken poem.

If love is like an epic romance novel, then friendship is like a poem: a statement of simplicity, beauty, and honesty. With the easy rhythm of a poem, our friends are always beside us, matching our pace in thought and action. Like a rhyme scheme, friends complement and complete us. Like similes, they are mirrors to reflect upon.

A friendship can be as independent as free verse, as lyrical as a sonnet, as simple as haiku. And though not all poetry deals with friendship, in all friendship, there must be some poetry.

Even if it's a couplet. — anonymous

Do you think, at your age it is right?

"In my youth," Father William replied to his son,
"I feared it might injure the brain;
But, now that I'm perfectly sure I have none,
Why, I do it again and again."

Then it came to me that maybe that's the only thing life rafts are suppose to do.
Taking the shipwrecked, not exactly to the land, but only in view of land.
The final mile being theirs alone to swim.

I want to thank my parents and my family for supporting me in almost everything I did, my teachers who think that theirs is the most important subject in the world, and my friends for constantly proving to me that yeah, it could get worse.

What you have just said is one of the most insanely idiotic things I have ever heard. At no point in you your rambling incoherent response were you even close to anything that could be considered a rational thought. Everyone in this room is now dumber for having listened to it. You receive no points, and may god have mercy on your soul.

It's not worth setting goals unless you have to strive for them.

Get the littl' job done.

There are many ways to make $ in life. Choose one that has meaning.

We laugh together,

We stand up for each other,

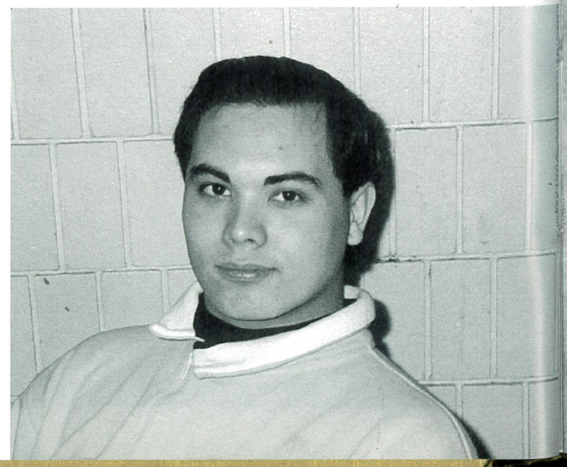

We're there for each other,

We help each other,

We are friends.

'Pooh, promise you won't forget about me, ever. Not even when I'm a hundred.'
Pooh thought for a little.
'How old shall I be then?'
'Ninety-nine.'
Pooh nodded. 'I promise,' he said.
Still with his eyes on the world Christopher Robin put out a hand and felt for Pooh's paw.

Thanks to my family and friends for making me smile.

"They ain't real. I thought as I walked down the hall, nary one. But I knew they were. You come into a strange place...and they don't seem real, but you know they are. You know they went wading in the creek when they were kids, and when they were bigger they used to go out about sunset and lean on the back fence and look across the country at the sky and not know what was happening inside them or whether they were happy or sad, and when they got grown they slept with their wives and tickled their babies to make them laugh and went to work in the morning and didn't know whay they wanted but had their reasons for doing things and wanted to do good things, because they always gave good reasons for the things they did, and then when they got old they lost their reasons for doing anything and sat on the bench in front of the harness shop and had words for the reasons other people had but had forgotten what the reasons were. And then they will lie in bed some morning just before day and look up at the ceiling they can scarecely see because the lamp is shaded with a pinned-on newspaper and they don't recognize the faces around the bed any more because the room is full of smoke, or fog, and it makes their eyes burn and gets in the throat. Oh, they are real, all right, and it may be the reason they don't seem real to you is that you aren't very real yourself." –Robert Penn Warren.

"My gum has lost its flavor. When that happens, I don't spit it out. I just add a new piece. After a few packs, it's like chewing a big, soggy sock! My jaws ache and I can't close my lips, so I wheeze through my open mouth and drool!" –Calvin.

To my friends–

You had better keep in touch. Otherwise, when I'm Prime Minister of Canada, I'll have to send some of my Mounties, ones with square jaws and silly khaki hats, to your posh Hollywood mansions to force you to write.

I'll remember you always.

To my family–

Words fail me. I love you.

After a while you learn the subtle difference between holding a hand and chaining a soul, and you begin to learn that kisses aren't contracts and presents aren't promises. And you begin to accept your defeats with your head up and your eyes open with the grace of a woman, not the grief of a child. After a while you learn that even sunshine burns if you get too much. So you plant your own garden and decorated your own soul instead of waiting for someone else to bring you flowers. And you learn that you really can endure, that you really are strong, and you really do have worth. And you learn and learn, with every good bye you learn.
