

Why Dual Language?

Pillars of Dual Language Education

For teachers to effectively teach cultural competence, language, and academics, they need to be skilled in modeling and giving specific feedback to students in these areas. We value native language models.

Consider writing instruction as an example. When a Costa Rican teacher teaches Spanish writing, she is also teaching culture in a way that a native English speaker from Colorado could not. Additionally she can give specific feedback on all aspects of Spanish writing, ensuring improvement with student writing skills.
