

Proudest Moment

The proudest moment I had during the internship was when I started to understand how to use QGIS software. I was proud of this moment because I spent a lot of time teaching myself on how to use it, play around with the tools it gave me, watching youtube videos, etc. In the end, I got to use this software to put our data that me and the other interns collected, and connected this data on a map so that we could see which schools needed retrofitting the most.
