Fifth Graders Work on Time Capsule

A fifth year class at Cutler School in West Swanzey is working on a very industrious project. With the help of their teacher Jim Shuffleton, the class is working on a time capsule to be stored in the Swanzey town vault for 100 years. The time capsule will contain: pictures of the Swanzey area, including community buildings and bridges, coins, stamps, books, art work and a tape explaining these items.

In the year 2076 this box will be given to a fifth year class, and be used by both the school and community as a source of historical information of the mid 1970's. Already many people outside the class who have generously helped with this project are: Mr. R. Bemis of the Bemis Construction Co., Mr. Robert Lantz of Lantz Jewelers, Keene, Grant City who provided the metal box for storing the items, and especially Mr. L.G. Armstrong, principal of Cutler School.

Compliments of

The CHESHIRE NATIONAL Bank

EARLY CHESHIRE BANK NOTES

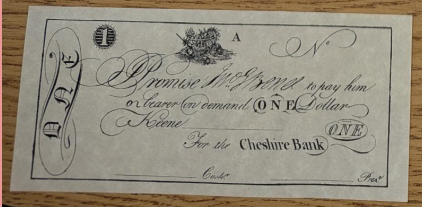

Organized in 1803, The Cheshire (National) Bank is the oldest bank in Keene. The bank issued its own currency until 1864. All bank notes were numbered, dated, and printed on one side only. Notes of many denominations were issued, amoung them fifty cent notes. The Cashier and President signed each note. President Samuel Grant signed thirty-three thousand, one hundred eighteen bills. Design and printing filled a small portion of the first bank notes, and counterfeits were quite common then. When a system of national currency was established in 1864, Cheshire Bank Notes could no longer be used.

Two New Earthquakes Hit Northern Italy Disaster Area

UDINE, Italy (UPI) — Two new tremors shook northern Italy's disaster area today, and a government spokesman said the death toll from Thursday's earthquake would soar over the 1,000-mark.

An army of soldiers and volunteer rescuers dug through the ruins of two dozen shattered mountain communities for the fourth day and officials said their original estimate of 1,000 dead may have been too low.

"When we first spoke of 1,000 dead, it was what we feared," Udine prefecture spokesman Natale Labia said. "Now we are almost there and we fear it will be even more."

Police said 815 bodies had been recovered from the rubble of northeast Italian towns and villages hit by the Thursday earthquake and 523 had been identified. Police reported about 1,300 injured. Officials would not estimate how many bodies might still be buried in the debris.

Digging resumed at dawn in debris made shakier Sunday by a heavy downpour.

Reports from outlying villages said at least three persons were found alive under the rubble Sunday.

Officials said it would be several more days before isolated hamlets can be combed for bodies or survivors. Two more shocks, measuring between 5 and 6 on the 12-degree Mercalli scale, were felt in the area before dawn, but no new damage or casualties were reported.

Rubble Probed for Earthquake Victims

Workers in Malano, Italy, continue slow process of searching debris of a five-floor building that collapsed during the earthquake that hit northern Italy, killing at least 1,000 people. See story on page 2. (UPI Photo)

The American Bald Eagle is the official emblem of the United States, under the Constitution of the Confederation. Took as its emblem in 1782 a bald eagle with outspread wings, a shield on its breast, in one talon an olive branch, in the other 13 arrows. The figure of the bald eagle, native to North America, has been used in early documents, printing, flags and money in many ways expressing national independence. The eagle on the United States coat of arms carries a shield in its beak bearing the Latin words, E Pluribus Unum, meaning one of many.

The Pawprix Heritage Shop, in celebration of the bi-centennial of American independence, offers the discriminating home a wide choice of Historic Flags authentically reproduced in three different sizes. A must for every teacher, student, scout, and history buff.

Adventures Here and There

DANIEL BOONE
For Daniel Boone, pioneer America was a great adventure. His restless love for the outdoors lured him into a forbidden wilderness of fierce animals and unfriendly Indian tribes.
Heading westward from the Carolinas in 1775, Daniel found traces of a path that Indian warriors used for centuries. He forged it through the Cumberland Mountains and deep into Kentucky. There, at the end of this famous Wilderness Trail, he established the settlement of Boonesborough.
Daniel was taken prisoner by the Shawnee Indians three years later. Threatened with death, he challenged his captors to tests of skill and courage. He proved himself so worthy that Chief Blackfish adopted him into the tribe.
What Daniel learned from Indian wisdom aided him in protecting fellow pioneers from Indian attacks. One day Boonesborough was stormed by 400 warriors. Daniel, along with only 30 men and 20 boys, held them off and saved the village.
Boone's America was a turbulent frontier. Yet he had the grit to dare the unknown so others might follow and thrive there. For those like Daniel Boone who are meant to lead . . . a thousand new American frontiers await you.
yes we can!

ROBERT FULTON
Frontier America lay just west of the original thirteen colonies. Settlers would soon come to plow the fields and build cities. But the overland trails were too slow for transporting the needed heavy supplies. And the thousands of miles of inland waterways were without an ocean breeze to move giant cargo vessels.
For Robert Fulton, an answer to this problem was hidden in water itself. Water, he noted, could be used to turn the wheel and push a ship. Fulton had already proved this by finding a way to make canals deeper for larger crafts. But in 1802, he turned to building his steamship, the "Clermont."
The difficulty was in getting a ship to support the bulky steam engine machinery. It seemed an impossible task. For this reason, folks called the "Clermont" Fulton's Folly. Imagine their surprise when, in 1807, the "Clermont" chugged up the Hudson River on its first steamy journeys to Albany. Soon new age of American growth. And what began as Fulton's Folly would some day bring the world closer together . . . and bring an understanding of the greatness in even the most incredible ideas of man.
yes we can!
