eLearning Day 1

You have worked on your Philosophy of Education in this class on several occasions.

Think about these Essential questions and reflect on your observations and how these observations, and what you have learned in the class so far might change your thinking about your philosophy.

Essential Questions

Which developmental theory/theorist from Module 2 has greatly impacted your ideas about student growth and development? What ideas from the theory will you add to your own philosophy?

Should specific time for unstructured play (beyond lunch/recess) be included in the educational curriculum? How might this time benefit elementary, middle, and high school students and teachers? What does play look like in the classroom?

Based on your observations of the various educational levels, what ideas about content, pacing, and knowledge can you add to your philosophy?

eLearning Day 2

eLearning Day 3

Brainstorm a list of 5 possible barriers to learning. Barriers include anything that could keep a student from learning. Record these in your notebook.

Then classify the barriers into categories such as academic, social, physical, personal, etc. Some of the barriers may overlap into more than one category.

Now choose one of the barriers and after conducting research, create an infographic that includes:

- a definition of the barrier
- current statistics
- causes, symptoms, and challenges of the barrier
- possible impact on education
- possible classroom accommodations for the barrier.

eLearning Day 5

You are required to have 2 notebooks for this class.

One is the class notebook, and the other is your Portfolio notebook with all your experiences from your Field Experience.

Refer to your handout on Portfolio requirements to make sure you have included everything that needs to be in your Portfolio notebook. If you have not started your Field Experience, you may want to start to organize this notebook.

Use this eLearning Day to make sure your class notebook is up to date.

Refer to the handout from the beginning of the year on what is to be included in the class notebook.

Make sure your activities are dated.
