

Junior athletes take to the pool at The Bolles School for the Olympics Development Program Skills and Drills day camp.

Junior athletes from our Resident communities were among the 30-plus participants in an Olympics Development Program Skills and Drills one-day camp at The Bolles School last month.

San Marco and Riverside area residents Alex Torres, Pierce and Princeton Macabasco and Thomas Raymor attended the development camp, also joined by Bolles students and swimmers Radu Vlad and John Erdal.

The camp drew campers from Jacksonville, Gainesville and Orlando, providing a day of advanced water polo instruction and competition alongside numerous athletes who represented USA Water Polo's Southeast Zone at Regional and National Olympic Development Program events last year.

"This was a great opportunity for our athletes to learn from top-level coaches like Bret and Katie while also getting in the pool and competing alongside other high-level players from across Florida," said Jacksonville Water Polo Founder Manny Torres. "Experiences like this expose our players to a higher level of the game and help them see what is possible as they continue to develop."
