

Students Honored Through National Celebrating Art Competition

Students at Canon-McMillan High School are being recognized for their creativity and artistic accomplishments through Celebrating Art, a national art competition for K–12 students across the United States, sponsored by Blick Art Materials.

Three of our talented students, Mayley Durmis (10), Campbell Garner (11), and Amber Mistick (11), have been selected for the opportunity to have their artwork published in the Celebrating Art keepsake art book.

Being selected for publication is a special honor. Each year, students from across the country submit their artwork to the competition, and only the top entries are invited to be published. The contest is designed to celebrate young artists, showcase their creativity, and provide students with a professional outlet for their work.

Entries are reviewed by a panel of judges and educators who carefully consider each submitted piece. The top 45% of entries are invited to be published in the hardbound Celebrating Art book, making selection a meaningful achievement for students and their teachers.

The goal of Celebrating Art is not only to recognize talented young artists but also to encourage students to continue expressing themselves through art. Having their work included in a professional publication gives students a lasting keepsake of their accomplishment and allows them to share their creativity with family, friends, and their community.

Congratulations to these talented young artists on earning this well-deserved recognition!
