DISTRICT SEEKING NEW PATH FOR SCHOOL CONSOLIDATION

September 11, 2026

(MACON, GA) – After discussions related to recent school consolidation options, the Bibb County School District is pausing consideration of scenarios previously shared at the August 10 Bibb County Board of Education Meeting. This means that there will be no consolidation recommendation to the Board of Education at this time.

As a next step, the district will launch a new advisory committee process to support the school consolidation exploration. The advisory committee will be composed of board members, district leaders and consultants who will determine evaluation criteria, review data, examine community feedback, consider multiple perspectives, ask questions, and help guide the development of any future options.

“The purpose of this new approach is to ensure that the process remains data-informed, transparent and community-centered,” said Superintendent Dr. Dan A. Sims. “Any future recommendations will be shaped through additional review, thoughtful discussion and continued engagement with the school communities most directly impacted.”

While full details of the new committee’s structure and membership are not complete at this time, it will be composed of Board of Education members, District leaders and other consultants. Community members will also be made aware of future opportunities to provide input and ask questions.
