Minimum College Admission Standards

An Overview for Students and Parents

College Academic Distribution Requirement (CADR):
CADRs are the requirements that students must complete during high school to meet college admission standards.

College admissions decisions are made by individual colleges and vary depending on the type of institution and other factors. While high school graduation (or the equivalent) is typically required, meeting high school graduation requirements is not the same as meeting college admissions standards.

Check the college/university website to see what each College requires as the minimum entry course requirements

What Do Colleges Look For?
A Holistic Review

Academic Preparation & Performance

Colleges look at many factors in reviewing applications for admission. Academic preparation and performance are primary indicators of preparation and performance. This includes:

- An overall strong level of academic achievement as demonstrated by rigor of curriculum, GPA, standardized test scores, extracurricular activities and academic distinctions.
- Enrollment in core subjects beyond the minimum required for college entrance. (Core subjects are English, math, science, social studies and world language.)
- Taking advantage of college preparatory courses during high school, such as Advanced Placement (AP), College In the High School/Dual Enrollment, Running Start and other meaningful academic choices.
- Taking a rigorous course load during senior year
- Demonstrating a pattern of academic improvement and growth
- Demonstrating exceptional talent and achievement in a specific area(s)

Personal Achievements and Characteristics

In addition to academic preparation and performance, personal achievements and characteristics are also carefully reviewed by college admission counselors. These include:

- Demonstrating a commitment to community service and leadership
- Exercising significant responsibility in your family, community, employment or through activities
- Attaining a college preparatory education in the face of personal adversity, economic disadvantages or disability
- Demonstrating cultural awareness or unique perspectives/experiences
- Demonstrating notable tenacity, insight, originality or creativity

The entire application, including the personal statement, is important in the individual application review. A high degree of care should be evident in both the content and mechanical/grammatical accuracy of all materials.

Note: Colleges are seeing a trend of personal statements written by parents. Don't even think about using Chat GPT or AI. This is easily recognizable and must be avoided at all costs!

Work Resources

On-the-Job Training: Turn a Job into a Career

Students need to be realistic about the types of jobs that are available.

Employees might be willing to teach someone the technical or job-specific skills needed for the job, but the employer expects the new employee to come prepared with good interpersonal skills. These skills include the ability to:

- Demonstrate a good work ethic; be dependable, trustworthy, punctual, polite, well-groomed.
- Communicate effectively—both verbally and in writing
- Work as part of a diverse team
- Ability to manage time, money & materials
- Use computers effectively
- Be a self-starter
- Demonstrate leadership skills

Student Job-Hunting Tips

- Network. Tell everyone you're looking for a job. Many positions are filled with friends and relatives of employees.
- Attend Field trips to worksites (list available in early September)
- Put together a quality resume and cover letter. Learn how to complete applications professionally and completely.
- Ask for letters of recommendation from teachers, counselors, coaches and employers. Complete the "Letter of Recommendation Request" Provide a copy of the form to at least three recommenders and give them at least three weeks to complete the letter.
- Think about where work opportunities are located. Personally visit and respectfully ask if they accept applications.
- Continue to contact the businesses and companies. Inform them of continued interest.
- Be prepared for an interview. Know something about the company, dress neatly, be punctual, look and act in a professional manner and be confident.

Apprenticeship Resources

What is an Apprenticeship?
Apprenticeships are career-training opportunities combining classroom instruction and on-the-job training under the supervision of a journey-level craft person or trade professional. Apprentices "earn while they learn" and do not have tuition costs to pay. Most apprenticeship programs in WA State are divided into 3 broad career pathways:

- Building and Construction (carpenter, plumbing, electrician, iron worker, etc.)
- Manufacturing and Machine (diesel, industrial millwright, machinist, etc.)
- Service and Support (firefighter, cosmetologist, imaging tech, paraprofessional education, etc.)

Benefits of apprenticeships:

- Paid training - you earn while you learn.
- Skill development - gain valuable skills and knowledge.
- Career advancement - build a strong foundation for your career and progressively increased wages.
- Nationally recognized credential - receive a professional credential upon completion.

Starting an apprenticeship is similar to applying for a job:

- Choose a program - research and select an apprenticeship program that aligns with your career goals and interests.
- Apply - submit an application to your chosen program.
- Interview and testing - if you are selected to move on, you will likely have an interview and potentially an aptitude test.
- Selection - get accepted into the program and start to earn while you learn.

Anyone can pursue an apprenticeship. Generally, you must:

- Be capable of performing the work, with or without reasonable accommodation.
- Possess the necessary skills and abilities to learn the trade.
- Provide proof of age, high school diploma or equivalent, and other required documents.

Helpful Apprenticeship Websites:

The application should begin in the spring of the junior year and is an intensive process.
