Wright City Celebrates Stadium Gift from American Foods Group

By Grant Lehmen, Editor-in-Chief

Superintendent Dr. Amy Salvo stands with members of the Wright City R-II Board of Education and representatives from American Foods Group during the ribbon-cutting ceremony at halftime on the Wright City football field. The event celebrated AFG's $2 million pledge toward the construction of America's Heartland Stadium.

It was more than just a typical Friday night in Wright City. As the stadium lights shone down on the field, fans packed the stands not just for football, but to witness a defining moment for the Wright City R-II School District and its future.

During a special ceremony, the district publicly recognized American Foods Group for a transformational $2 million pledge to support the construction of America's Heartland Stadium. The new stadium, which will serve as a home for school athletics, performances and community events, represents a major investment in both students and the broader Wright City community.

"It is truly surreal to stand here tonight with our Board of Education and recognize a community partner that not only values the success of our students, but also understands the importance of one of the greatest gathering places in our hometown, our school," said Dr. Amy Salvo, superintendent of Wright City R-II School District. "This gift is more than dollars and cents, it is an investment in our kids, our families and our community's future."

The event included a warm welcome for several representatives from American Foods Group who traveled from across the country to attend the celebration. Among the guests were Scott and Maria Willert, President of American Foods Group Supply Chain, from Green Bay, Wisconsin; Ken and Jennifer Allred, Executive Vice President of Engineering, from Omaha, Nebraska; and John and Adriana Kelly, Vice President of Americas Heartland Packing, located here in Warren County, Missouri. Dozens of Heartland Packing employees were also present in the stands and were recognized by the district for their role in the company's growing relationship with the community.

As part of the evening's festivities, a ribbon-cutting ceremony was held on the field to mark the beginning of a new chapter for Wright City. Dr. Salvo had the honor of cutting the ribbon, signaling the formal start of the stadium project made possible in part by American Foods Group's generosity. In a touching moment, the district presented the company with a retired Wright City football helmet, a symbolic gesture of gratitude and shared pride.

"Please join me in showing our heartfelt appreciation to American Foods Group for believing in Wright City," said Salvo, addressing the crowd, "and for helping us create a stadium that will stand as a symbol of pride for our students and our community for years to come."

The stadium is envisioned as more than just a place to play sports. It will be a venue where students perform under the lights, a gathering place for communities, and a place where memories are made for years to come. With the support of American Foods Group, Wright City is not just building a facility. It is building opportunity, unity and pride that will last for generations.

StuCo Scores with Food Drive at Home Football Games

By Quinn Schnarre, Sports Editor

Wright City High School's Student Council combined school spirit with community service during two home football games this season, holding a food drive to support the Wright City Food Pantry.

The food drive took place on August 29 and September 12, with fans encouraged to bring nonperishable food items as they came to cheer on the Wildcats.

Both events were a success, with collection bins filling up quickly before kickoff and at halftime.

"We were so proud of the turnout," said Whitney Schuenemeyer, Student Council sponsor. "It's important that we show our support for the community, especially during events where the town comes together. Giving back while cheering on the Wildcats is a perfect combination of school pride and compassion."

Student Council members organized the collection, greeted fans at the gates, and helped pack up donations to deliver to the Wright City Food Pantry following each game. The donations will help provide essential items to local families in need.

The initiative not only supported a worthy cause but also brought students, families and community members together with a shared goal: to help others while showing school spirit. With strong participation at both games, the Student Council is already looking ahead to future service events.

"It's about more than just helping for one night," Schuenemeyer said. "It's about creating a culture of kindness and leadership at our school."

Wright City Parents as Teachers Program Supports Families From the Start

By Claire Williams, Editor-in-Chief

Wright City's Parents as Teachers program is helping families build strong foundations for lifelong learning by starting at birth.
The free program, offered to all families in the district with children from prenatal to age 5, promotes early development, learning and health by actively supporting and engaging parents and caregivers.

The program's mission is to partner with families during the most critical years of a child's development.

"We believe parents are their child's first and best teacher, and we're here to nurture and support families in the Wright City School District," said Kamie Williams, Parents as Teachers director and educator.

The program offers personalized home visits, where trained parent educators provide guidance tailored to each child's developmental stage. During these visits, parents receive information and activity ideas that support their child's growth and school readiness.

"Parents as Teachers is a strong advocate of early literacy because it builds a foundation of lifelong learning and a love of books," Williams said.

In addition to home visits, Parents as Teachers offers Group Connections, which are one-hour activity-based sessions that are both fun and informative. The program also hosts monthly center-based playgroups, giving children opportunities to learn through play while offering parents a chance to connect with others.

"Playgroups and Group Connections open the door for families to network with other families. Children get the opportunity to interact with peers, work on social-emotional skills and pretend play," Williams said.

Screenings are another vital component of the program. Children are evaluated in areas such as language, personal-social skills, intellectual and motor development, as well as hearing and vision. These early screenings help identify any potential issues that may affect learning later on.

The goal of Parents as Teachers is to reach every family in the district. By offering services that begin prenatally, the program helps ensure children are better prepared when they enter kindergarten.

WCHS HOSA Hosts Successful Blood Drive

By Carter Rodriguez, Staff Writer

Wright City High School students stepped up in a big way during their recent American Red Cross blood drive hosted by Future Health Professionals (HOSA), with 24 appointments scheduled and 18 units of blood successfully collected.

The event was organized and led by the school's chapter of HOSA, a national student organization that empowers students to pursue careers in healthcare. The drive was a collaborative effort led by HOSA President Karsten Uhl and Vice President Olivia Wilson, who, along with other student volunteers, ensured the event ran smoothly from start to finish.

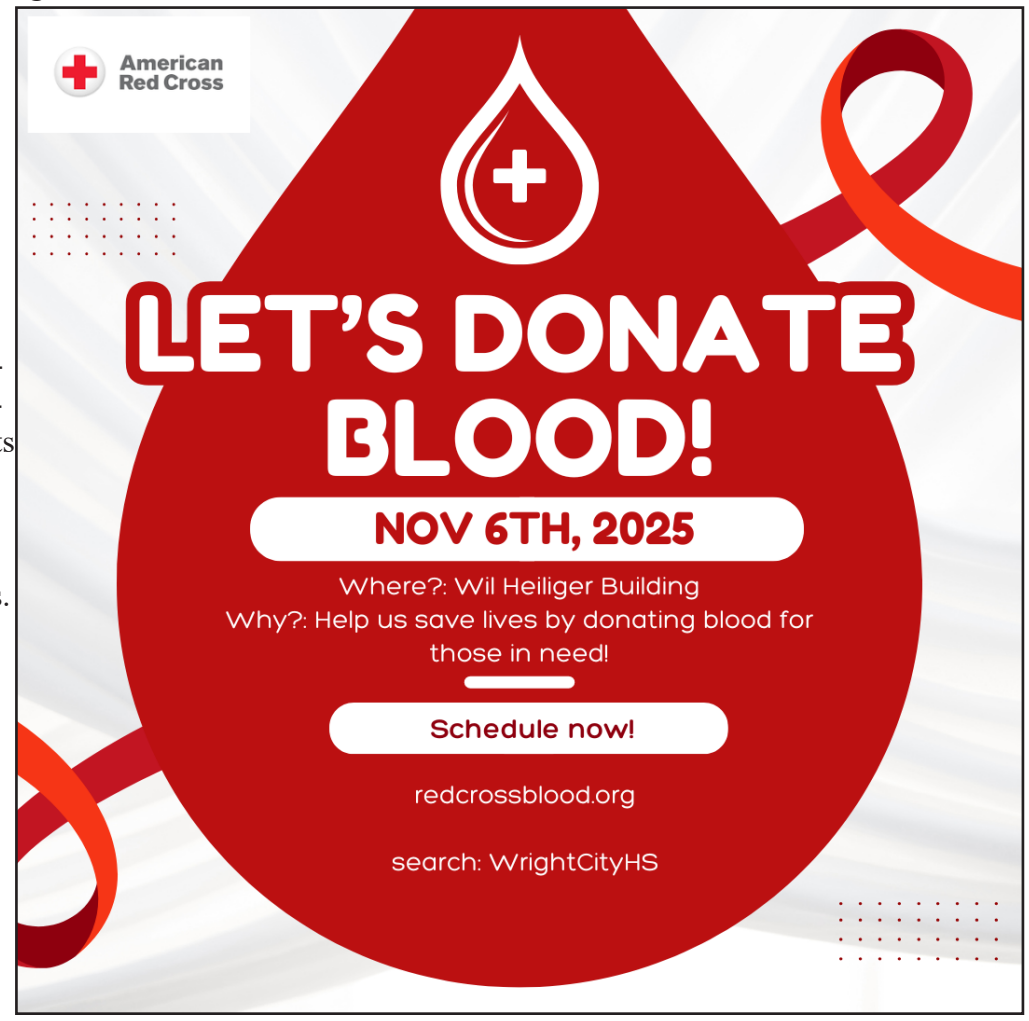

"HOSA is about more than just future careers," said Wilson. "It's about making a difference in our community right now."

Some students donated blood for the first time during the event, marking a major personal milestone. One of them was Matthew Johnston, a Wright City High School junior.

"Donating my blood was very nerve-wracking; I've never donated before, so it was a new experience," Johnston said. "Fortunately, I can donate, so I did just that—not for myself, but to help others."

The drive highlighted the mission of HOSA, which was founded to provide a stepping stone for high school students entering the medical field. With growing interest in healthcare careers nationwide, HOSA continues to offer students early exposure to the values and responsibilities of becoming medical professionals.

Thanks to the dedication of Wright City High School's HOSA members, 18 units of blood will go on to help patients in need, further demonstrating that even students can make a life-saving impact.

Wildcats Celebrate 2005 Football Team

By Addie Ward, News Editor

Wright City High School took time during its 2025 Homecoming celebration to honor a defining moment in the school's athletic history. On Thursday, Sept. 18, at the Homecoming football game at America's Heartland Stadium, the school recognized the members of the 2005 District Championship football team.

The 2005 Wildcats made history two decades ago by bringing home the district title, a season remembered for its determination, unity and impact on the Wright City football program. Their championship run remains a point of pride for the community and a milestone in the growth of Wildcat athletics.

The returning seniors from the 2005 team were welcomed back to midfield during a special ceremony. The crowd celebrated the legacy of a team that helped set a new standard for success. The recognition was part of Wright City's broader Homecoming festivities, which included a week of themed events, a parade, a pep assembly, and the crowning of the 2025 Homecoming King and Queen at the dance the following night. Honoring the 2005 team served as a reminder of the tradition and dedication that continue to shape the school's athletic programs.

By spotlighting the 2005 District Champions, Wright City not only paid tribute to past accomplishments but also connected today's players with the foundation built by those who came before them.

The school extended its appreciation to the 2005 team for their lasting contribution to Wildcat history. Their presence at this year's Homecoming highlighted the spirit of community and continuity that defines Wright City R-II School District.

Past and present Wildcats gather at midfield at Americas Heartland Stadium on Thursday, Sept. 18, as Wright City High School honors the 2005 District Championship football team during Homecoming. The ceremony celebrated the legacy of the program and its continued growth.

Care to Learn Supports Wright City Students

By Claire Williams, Editor-in-Chief

As the school year begins, the Wright City R-II School District is continuing its work to support students through its Care to Learn chapter, which provides immediate assistance in the areas of health, hunger and hygiene.

Since its launch in August 2016, the chapter has received over $105,000 in grant funding and provided more than $125,000 in direct support to students and families. Funds have helped cover essentials such as clothing, eyeglasses, hygiene products, groceries, temporary housing, bedding, and even lice treatments. Care to Learn also pays down lunch account balances, offers Christmas meal vouchers and helps provide items like locks, blankets and classroom snacks.

All funding comes from local fundraising efforts, including staff payroll deductions, hygiene drives, special events and annual campaigns like Give STL Day.

Care to Learn ensures students' basic needs are met quickly so they can stay focused in class. The district encourages continued participation and support throughout the year to help every student succeed.

For more information, staff and community members are encouraged to stay involved as new opportunities to support the program arise.

WCHS Celebrates 2025 Homecoming with "Greatest Show on Earth" Theme

By Riley Rapa and Tiana Sims, Staff Writers

Wright City High School students, staff and community members came together the week of Sept. 16 to celebrate Homecoming 2025 under this year's lively theme: "The Greatest Show on Earth."

The week was filled with spirited dress-up days, community events, and competitions, culminating in a festive homecoming dance. Organized by the Wright City High School Student Council, the week-long celebration aimed to bring fun, unity and school pride to students of all grades.

"This year's theme allowed everyone to get creative and really go all out," said Student Council sponsor Whitney Schuenemeyer. "We wanted to bring a little magic and excitement to the school, and I think we definitely accomplished that."

Spirit Week Sparks Competition

Throughout the week, students participated in various activities to earn points for their grade-level classes, including themed dress-up days, spare change wars, float decorating, and assembly games.

The junior class came out on top, earning the most spirit points and being named Spirit Week Champions.

"We were determined to win this year," said junior class president Olivia Wilson. "Our class really came together—from decorating our float to dressing up every day—and we had so much fun doing it. The competition was fierce, but it made the win that much sweeter."

One of the key events of the week was the Change Wars, a friendly competition between classes to raise funds. All proceeds were donated to support the John Aber Memorial Tree, honoring a beloved Wright City R-II School District staff member and reinforcing the week's emphasis on giving back.

Parade and Assembly Highlight Unity

On Thursday, Sept. 18, the school hosted its traditional Homecoming Parade, featuring colorful floats, marching bands, sports teams and local organizations. This year's parade had two grand marshals: Wright City R-II Superintendent Dr. Amy Salvo and Wright City Mayor Michelle Heiliger.

The decision to include both leaders as grand marshals reflected the district's guiding principle, "Together We Can," emphasizing collaboration between the school and community.

"We wanted to show that unity goes beyond just our school. It's something that connects us all in Wright City," said Schuenemeyer. "Having both Dr. Salvo and Mayor Heiliger in the parade was a perfect symbol of that."

Before the parade, students gathered for the Homecoming Assembly, which featured high-energy games, class competitions, and a special performance by the Wright City dance team, joined by senior football players as surprise guest performers.

Dance Closes the Week "Greatest Show on Earth"

The festivities concluded with the Homecoming Dance on Friday, Sept. 19, held in the high school cafetorium, which was transformed into a circus-inspired scene, "Greatest Show on Earth."

Student Council members decorated the space with bold colors, lights and themed décor. The night included music, games, and a photo booth for students to enjoy.

Seniors Quincy Rice and Jenna Fenwick were crowned Homecoming King and Queen, receiving cheers and applause from their classmates.

"The dance was the perfect ending to an unforgettable week," Schuenemeyer said. "We couldn't have pulled it off without our amazing Student Council members and the support of staff and students."

Wilson agreed, adding that the experience brought the student body closer together. "Homecoming isn't just about school pride, it's about making memories," she said. "And I think this year, we created memories we'll never forget."

FBLA at Wright City High School Sets Big Goals for 2025 with a Strong Start

By Brenna Plunkett, News Editor

With more than 50 students in attendance, Wright City High School's chapter of Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) launched its 2025 season with energy, ambition and a clear commitment to service, education and progress.

The first meeting, held on Sept. 5, marked not only the beginning of a new year for the largest Career and Technical Student Organization (CTSO) on campus but also the debut of a dynamic new officer team. Led by President Trinity DeWitt, the team introduced their goals for the year and inspired new and returning members to engage in leadership, community service and professional development opportunities.

"It was amazing to see so many people show up to our first meeting," said DeWitt. "FBLA has always been a space where students grow, lead and give back. We're ready to continue building that legacy."

Leadership With Purpose

The newly installed officer team represents a diverse group of motivated student leaders committed to expanding FBLA's impact both in and beyond the school. The 2025 officer lineup includes President Trinity DeWitt; Vice Presidents of Membership Hailey Billham and Janya Davis; Vice President of FBLA Relations Garrett Lehmen; Vice President of Communications Matthew Johnston; Secretary Morgan Nute; Treasurer Maura Juden; Historian Daisy Hunter Valencia; and Parliamentarian Aiden Taylor.

They are guided by returning student advisers and former executive team members Grant Lehmen and Claire Williams, both of whom bring a deep understanding of FBLA's mission and structure.

"Our officer team is full of passionate people," said Vice President of Membership Janya Davis. "Each of us brings something different to the table. That's what makes us strong."

A Legacy of Involvement and Growth

FBLA at WCHS has established itself as a force for good within the school and local community. With more than 110 members last year, the chapter became the largest CTSO on campus, participating in numerous events, volunteer opportunities and leadership conferences.

One of the most notable achievements was the chapter's participation in the 2024 National Leadership Conference (NLC) in Anaheim, California. Members competed in business-related events and attended workshops with students from across the country.

"That experience was life-changing," said Vice President of Communications Matthew Johnston. "It showed us what FBLA can do, not just at a local level but nationally. We're aiming to get even more members involved this year so they can experience it too."

The goal for 2025 is to surpass last year's membership numbers and deepen involvement through year-round events, competitions and community outreach.

Service, Education and Progress

As a national student organization, FBLA focuses on three core values: service, education and progress. The WCHS chapter lives out these values by organizing volunteer projects, hosting professional development events and creating opportunities for students to grow their leadership and career-readiness skills.

"Our goal is to be present and helpful wherever we're needed. That might be at school events, in the community or helping other student organizations," said Vice President of FBLA Relations Garrett Lehmen. "We want people to see FBLA and know we're here to serve."

From tutoring peers to assisting with local charity events, FBLA members are committed to making a positive impact. The group also plans to continue partnering with local businesses and civic leaders to give students a hands-on understanding of how leadership and service work in real-world settings.

Parliamentarian Aiden Taylor noted that planning and structure are key to the group's continued success. "We use our meetings not just to update members but to teach professional skills, encourage teamwork and make sure we're always aligned with our mission," he said.

Building a Future in Business and Beyond

With their sights set on recruiting even more students, the officer team is focused on making FBLA approachable and inclusive for all WCHS students. Whether or not they plan to pursue a career in business, the skills they learn can benefit them in any future path.

"FBLA isn't just for future business majors," said Vice President of Membership Hailey Billham. "It's for anyone who wants to grow as a leader, serve their community and gain confidence in their abilities."

The group is also promoting early involvement by encouraging underclassmen to join and stay active throughout their high school careers. The benefits include not just networking and leadership experience, but also access to scholarships, competitive events and state and national conferences.

Historian Daisy Hunter Valencia emphasized the importance of documenting the chapter's accomplishments and growth. "It's exciting to look back at where we started and see how far we've come. I want future members to be able to see that and feel proud to be part of it," she said.

Treasurer Maura Juden added that responsible budgeting and fundraising are also critical to the chapter's success. "We're working hard to make sure we can afford trips and events for everyone who wants to be involved. Financial support makes these experiences possible."

Looking Ahead

With momentum from a strong opening meeting and a dedicated officer team, the Wright City High School FBLA chapter is poised for another successful year. The group plans to host workshops, participate in regional and state competitions and continue serving wherever they are needed.

"FBLA is more than a club. It's a community," said Secretary Morgan Nute. "We're learning how to lead, how to help and how to make a difference. That's something we'll carry with us long after graduation."

As the 2025 school year unfolds, the message from FBLA is clear. Wright City's future business leaders are already hard at work, and they're just getting started.
