Halifax County Schools Administrators Strengthen Instructional Alignment Through Professional Learning

HALIFAX, NC - Halifax County Schools administrators came together for Administrative Professional Learning Day, continuing the district's focus on building momentum across its schools and strengthening instructional leadership.

The professional learning experience provided school leaders with an opportunity to step into classrooms, observe teaching and learning in action through instructional rounds, and engage in conversations centered on strengthening instruction and maintaining alignment across the district.

Instructional rounds allow administrators to learn alongside one another by observing classroom practices, identifying trends, and reflecting on how district and school priorities are being implemented in classrooms. The experience also provided leaders with an opportunity to see firsthand how students are engaging with instruction across the district.

Following the classroom visits, administrators continued their professional learning through collaboration and reflection, connecting what they observed to the district's instructional priorities and identifying opportunities to strengthen support at their schools.

Administrative Professional Learning Days ensures that the work happening at the district level remains connected to teaching and learning in every classroom. Halifax County Schools remains focused on building upon its progress, strengthening alignment, and ensuring every student has access to high-quality instruction and meaningful opportunities to succeed.
