On her wedding day, Eurydice takes a fatal fall and descends into the Underworld, where the dead lose their language and memories. Reunited with her long-lost father, she slowly relearns her past word by word. When her husband, Orpheus, journeys into the land of the dead to save her, Eurydice faces an impossible choice: return to the living or stay with her father among the dead. In this surreal reimagining of the classic myth, Eurydice discovers that even the deepest love might not be enough to rewrite the stars.
